LET THE PAST GO

I have been attending basketball games at Mac Court since 1973. I cheered for Ronnie Lee, Ernie Kent, the Lukes, Aaron Brooks and many other Ducks. Mac Court was an exciting venue when it was the home court of an exciting team. Unfortunately, the old arena has a host of problems. Many of the seats have restricted sightlines, the guest accommodations are poor and the locker rooms are among the worst in college basketball. In recent years, without an exciting team, Mac Court was exposed for what it really is — an old building in disrepair that no longer meets its objectives.

The new Matt Arena, rising along Franklin Boulevard, will be the premier college basketball arena in the nation. With its steep contours, it will provide the intimacy of Mac Court but with excellent sightlines, modern facilities, comfortable accommodations for the teams and room for more fans. The investment in Matt Court is a better use of funds than trying to turn Mac Court into a modern arena. The extent of renovation that would have been required would have had Mac Court lovers crying foul and the result would have been a compromise. The Ducks and their fans deserve, and are getting, better.

As for the future, the value of a basketball arena without a basketball team is like the value of a baseball stadium without a baseball team. Eugene will soon have both. Do we hold on to these old buildings amidst dreams of the past or do we move forward and put the places to better use? I believe it is time to let them both go.

CLOSING THE GAP

There are many reasons we need to put arts education back in the public schools. The arts are proven to help close the achievement gap. The collection of research described in Critical Links: Learning in the Arts and Student Academic and Social Development finds that learning in the arts may be uniquely able to boost learning and achievement for young children, students from economically disadvantaged circumstances and students needing remedial instruction.

Arts education helps prepare a creative workforce. According to a 2007 Conference Board report "Ready to Innovate," there is overwhelming support from school superintendents (98 percent) and corporate leaders (96 percent) that creativity is of increasing importance to the U.S. workforce.

Most importantly, art gives meaning to life. We are robbing the next generation of that meaning by withholding art from our public schools.

library and the bus station! We citizens of Lane County need to encourage our City Council to approve all funding avenues available to the city of Eugene to help build the new LCC Energy Center in the Downtown Urban Renewal District.

We should remember that Oregon community colleges have lost proportionally more funding than any other public education entities since the budget cutbacks started in 1992, due to passage (just barely in the state and rejected in Lane County) of Measure 5. Lane County has a unique opportunity to establish an anchor for the new wave of green businesses. Oregon has a proud heritage of progressive thinkers and cutting edge endeavors, and our own Lane Community College plays an important role in making the future happen by bridging the gap between smart ideas and their local implementation.

THE DEEPEST WOUNDS

First and foremost I want to say thanks. As a medic currently in Iraq and a local I want to thank EW for putting in a positive story about our troops in Iraq (cover story, 3/18). It was truly nice to see something about the positive work that we are doing here. I was happy that you showed that we were helping injured locals and can say honestly that most patients I have treated here are locals — and were not injured by coalition forces.

I don't ask you to stand behind this war, the people who started it or the reasons we are there. Just please understand that the soldier on the ground wants nothing more than to be back home with his or her loved ones.

Douglas MacArthur once said "The soldier above all others prays for peace, for it is the soldier who must suffer and bear the deepest wounds and scars of war."

David Ure

A MORE CARING SOCIETY

Eventually we will have health care for all. I remember speaking up for Medicare in the 1960s against some future John Birchers. I guess it isn't too different with today's tea baggers screaming their selfish rants.

This is not a great health care bill, but hopefully it is a first step toward a more caring society that believes every sick person should be cared for. And hopefully it will become a caring society that believes everyone should have an opportunity to be fully educated and have a roof overhead and a meal to eat. We need to help each other, and health care must be there for everyone.

As former Labor Secretary Robert Reich wrote after the vote: "Don't believe anyone who says Obama's health care legislation marks a swing of the pendulum back toward the Great Society and the New Deal. Obama's health bill is a very conservative piece of legislation, building on a Republican (a private market approach) rather than a New Deal foundation. The New Deal foundation would have offered Medicare to all Americans or, at the very least, featured a public insurance option."

Maybe in Oregon?

NAG CHAMP

I am old enough to remember when breeders (i.e. heterosexuals) defined "gay" only as "bright" instead of "homosexual" as Sally Sheklow (3/18) does, or "dumb" as slackers do today.

I believe this etymology of "gay" irritates Sheklow as it did the owner of The Gay Blade men's clothing store chain in Oregon and Washington because he felt forced to drop the word "gay" from the stores' name in the 1970s.

Sheklow misses that slackers were raised on the gay-friendly cartoon "South Park" Republican values. They defend obscene speech and reject censorship for "political correctness."

As a child, I vowed never to become like the old nags who forbid me from saying "God damn it" because it is blasphemy. I hope Sheklow isn't becoming an old nag like me.

LCC ENERGY CENTER

An opportunity to revitalize and strengthen a portion of downtown and meet the educational needs of our students is at hand. We have an opportunity to train future leaders and workers in green jobs via the innovative LEED-standard Energy Center. We have an opportunity to bring short-term and long-term jobs into this area via the project, as well as bring additional stimulus to businesses in the surrounding area. We need this now.

LCC President Mary Spilde and the LCC Board are committed to this project. Let us join them, creating not only an educational legacy, but also the start of an economic one. It's a project that will provide jobs, bring more people into the area, stimulate existing businesses in the area and prepare students for the future.

Our library and Hult Center are solid

BLACK BREATH-HEAVY BREATHING: The bands signing with Southern Lord, combined the best attributes of hardcore, metal, punk, and thrash. For the bands first full length recording, Black Breath has amplified their sound into a darker, heavier realm.

JOE BONAMASSA-BLACK ROCK: Joe signed up Blues legend B.B. King for a duet of the Willie Nelson-penned song, Night Life. Other tracks include Beck's Spanish Boots, Cohen's poetic Bird On A Wire, and many more.

PIETA BROWN-ONE & ALL: Brown's stunning breakout album of 12 original songs, perfectly melds roots rock and moody alt-country. Following up on her critically acclaimed EP Shimmer, Pieta delivers hypnotic melodies and soul-tinged grooves.

SHARON JONES / DAP-KINGS-I LEARNED THE HARD WAY: Sharons raw power, rhythmic swagger, moaning soulfulness, and melodic command set her firmly alongside Tina Turner, James Brown, Mavis Staples, and Aretha as a fixture in the canon of soul music.

BLACK FRANCIS (FRANK BLACK)-NONSTOP-ROTIK: You'll find yourself unable to think of anything else as you hum along to its infectious tunes. The album takes time to grow on the listener who may be unsure at first but is soon addicted.

BROTHA LYNCH HUNG-DINNER & A MOVIE: Strap in and hold on as Brotha Lynch Hung takes listeners on a ride to the deepest recesses of his mind.

HARLEM-HIPPIES: Harlem have a reputation of making club gigs seem like living room shows (and vice-versa). Hippies harnesses this in its 16 blasts of pure pop energy with songwriting that is as tightly masterful as it is true to a joyfully frantic primitivism.

GRAHAM PARKER-IMAGINARY TELEVISION: ... "I went off to write treatments to my own-imaginary TV shows which I would grace with the correct theme tunes, not ones chosen by idiots.(Instead of lyrics on the album cover, you get plots!)" --Graham Parker

ENERGY PARTY'S OVER

In 1948 producing a dollar of GDP required 20,000 BTUs while today it requires only 8,500 BTUs due to efficiency improvements. And yet, energy use still rose over three-fold due to profound economic growth. Today the party's over. According to Jeff Rubin, chief economist of CIBC world markets, how could the U.S. sub-prime mortgage market be big enough to blow up the world economy? Why was the Japanese recession twice as deep, and in Germany 50 percent deeper? Why did those countries enter recession before the U.S.?

The answer is simple: All of the major U.S. recessions experienced since WW II followed sudden oil price hikes, and the run-up to $147 a barrel in 2008 was the biggest ever experienced. Banks failed because they lent more than they had on deposit, confident that tomorrow's expansion was collateral for today's debt. Expect $225 oil by 2012 and the end of globalization.

According to two oil company CEOs, Margerie of Total and Gabrielli of Petrobras, the world has already passed or is close to peak oil, the point when new oil production capacity additions cannot compensate for declining production from existing wells, which is now 5.1 percent per year, meaning just to keep production flat now requires "a new Saudi Arabia every two years." That means by 2014, the world will need a new 20 million barrels a day of oil production just so it can use the same 86 million it currently uses, let alone keep up with demand growth.

PROSECUTE THE SHRINKS

Rebecca Riley's mother has been found guilty of murdering her, while Dr. Kayoko Kifuji, the psychiatrist who prescribed 3-year-old Rebecca Zyprexa, clonidine and valproate will not face criminal prosecution. Nor should she — selling patented items is what the business does. There is no medical test (such as a blood test) to confirm any one of psychiatry's billable diagnoses. Thus the doctor uses word tests and professional opinion to classify you abnormal, and since it is not testable, they cannot be wrong!

"Antipsychotic" drugs prescribed for children between the ages of 2 and 5 doubled over the past decade. Kifuji was doing the job as set out for her by the leaders of psychiatry such as Joseph Biederman, Raquel Gur, Donald Klein and Janet Wozniak. It is they who should be prosecuted.

New light has been brought to bear on the astroturf nature of "grassroots" Pharma front organizations such as NAMI and The Child and Adolescent Bipolar Foundation through investigations by Sen. Charles Grassley. NAMI received more than $28 million from pharmaceutical companies in the last four years.

Vera Sharav states, "Drug manufacturers are hardly the only ones to blame — American children are being victimized by a consortium of influential psychiatrists at prestigious academic institutions. These commercially driven stakeholders are condemning children to a life of drug dependency and drug-induced disabling chronic physical and mental illnesses."

PARTY POOPER

Jerry Ritter (3/11) is right on. It is definitely time to abolish and prohibit all political parties. Only then will our elected representatives stop following the party line and start representing their constituents. This garbage of all politics and no governing has got to stop.

INJUSTICE TO THE FILM

Jason Blair, in his review of Michael Haneke's The White Ribbon forcefully states, "writer/director Michael Haneke is suggesting that a village of outwardly pious, inwardly malicious teens might possess the strain of hatred which metastasized during wartime — a reach that is aesthetically and morally weak-kneed."

Well, the German-born but raised-in-Austria director actually is about far more than that simplistic mischaracterization (the action is pre-WWI not II). Haneke's motivation, he stated in an LA Weekly interview, was to examine how Nazism grew in Germany. In this brilliant film, he shows its genesis from powerful, unforgiving German Protestant origins (pre-World War I) — in contrast to the more forgiving Austrian Catholicism.

To miss this is to view, as Blair obviously does, the film as a two-dimensional horror film; this is a grave injustice to the film, the director, and lovers of film. I might also note that, in the header, Blair reveals much of the film's suspense, its mystery. He should be forced to wear "The White Ribbon."

TRULY SUSTAINABLE?

Thanks to EW for the surprise of finding my picture on the cover of the March 11 "Nesting" issue.

While countless politicians and bureaucrats could be expected to nonchalantly refer to my environmentally innovative approach to building as "sustainable," the fact is that most of what I do doesn't even come close to what I call "genuine, meaningful sustainability."

For sustainability to be taken seriously, it needs to involve a rigorous set of criteria including energy, economics, the use of nonrenewable resources and exponential growth within a closed, finite system (Earth). When viewed through the lens of reality, one discovers that true sustainability is a dauntingly complex, remote, far-flung ideal.

Strangely enough though, in spite of such difficulty, there is not one shred of doubt as to whether the human family will achieve true sustainability. To do anything less is unsustainable. We will either achieve it voluntarily, or we will achieve it involuntarily as it is forced upon us by reality. There is no guarantee that the end result will be pleasant or feature the conveniences that we take for granted today.

Those interested in learning more about the intriguing challenge of designing and implementing a sustainable world are welcome to attend my talk and presentation, "Embracing the Inevitable - Humankind's Reluctant Yet Certain Transition to Sustainability" at 7 pm Earth Day, Thursday, April 22, at Tsunami Books. I'm also happy to present to classes of any age group.

MOVEMENT MAKERS

I've seen Eugene's downtown in nearly all its incarnations since the late '60s. We've struggled as a community for years to bring life back downtown and every plan is met with opposition from some group or another. The local divisiveness on this issue has become an embarrassment. We mock our leaders in D.C. for being unable to get anything done, yet we are modeling the same territorial behavior here at home.

As a person who loves Eugene because of and in spite of its challenges, I feel that the door to revitalization is closing fast. Many people I know simply overlook downtown as an important part of our community's personality. They are tired of the constant battles and roadblocks and are, quite simply, bored with the whole thing. Their shopping and dining loyalties are shifting to the Oakway area, the south Willamette area and even Crescent Village. I urge you to get behind the LCC downtown proposal. The sooner it gets started, the better. It may represent one of our last opportunities. Please don't let it go by.

COURTHOUSE GARDEN SHOWING PROGRESS

It's a little early for bees on the site, but a distinct buzz is building around the new Courthouse Garden behind the new federal building in Eugene (see story 3/18). Here's the latest:

The first planting of blueberries donated by Fall Creek Nursery began this rainy week involving students from Ann Bettman's UO landscape architecture class; Bettman and Federal Judge Ann Aiken will speak at City Club about the Courthouse Garden at 11:50 am Friday, April 2, at the Hilton; and a work party inviting the public to get involved is planned for 10 am to 1 pm Saturday, April 3, rain or shine. Wheelbarrows and some tools are available.

The last two Saturdays have seen supervised work crews from Judge Aiken's re-entry court program moving dirt and preparing mounded rows for planting. UO student volunteers have also been spending time at the site.

"There's a buzz building at the UO around this project, for sure," says Dan Dingfield of the garden's steering committee. "We are confident this work will continue because it has inspired a lot of people already. Every volunteer session has witnessed the power of teamwork. Every session has ended with participants testifying to their own pleasure, their own surprise, at how much a commonly focused group can achieve."

Dingfield says Sheriff Russ Burger "has worked to make a crew available as well as arranging with Papé Machinery a most timely use of a John Deere backhoe on the site." District Attorney Alex Gardner and his wife, Karin, have been hauling gravel and moving it around with a tractor.

A major donation came from EWEB, says Dingfield, "providing us with volunteer labor who have designed our irrigation system, done the water installation including equipment, and then arranged for Rain Bird and United Pipe donations of all other irrigation materials."

Looking ahead, "We still need money, more tools, labor, and heavy equipment time," says Dingfield. And he thinks the project might get some national attention from outgoing UO athletic director Mike Bellotti when he gets a chance to plug his hometown and the UO at his new job on ESPN. — Ted Taylor

CHIEF REJECTS CRB, CHARTER

A Eugene City Charter amendment passed overwhelmingly by voters requires the city to have a police Civilian Review Board (CRB) with the power to require police to re-open internal investigations, but the Eugene city attorney and police chief argue that's not the law and they won't comply with it.

The issue arose last month after the police chief and city attorney refused a CRB order to reopen an investigation of the Taser of a Chinese student in his bed.

The City Charter states that "the City Council shall authorize the Civilian Review Board to ... require that the city re-open an investigation." After Police Chief Pete Kerns announced that the Taser of the unarmed, non-violent student was "reasonable," the CRB voted to require that the city reopen the investigation.

But Kerns refused, declaring in a memo to the CRB last month, "I will not re-open the investigation."

City attorney Glenn Klein backed Kerns with a legal argument that the Eugene City Charter provision applies "only to the City Council."

Klein did not explain in his memo why he believes a charter obligation to the City Council does not also obligate the city government as a whole. The charter states that its words "shall be liberally construed" and that "all power of the city is vested in the City Council."

Klein argues that an ordinance passed by the council and a contract signed by the city manager do not authorize the CRB to order the reopening investigations against police that the police have deemed closed. But he does not argue that the council can pass ordinances or the city manager write contracts that overrule the City Charter. In fact he states that "the purpose of this new [charter] amendment was to prevent a future City Council from eliminating the auditor or the CRB."

The CRB discussed the city's rejection of its order to reopen the investigation at its March 9 meeting. Members quoted from the charter provision and wondered why the city wasn't following it.

"I'm not confident with the city attorney's memo that that's cut in stone," said CRB member Steve McIntire. "I see the word 'shall.'"

"The charter says the City Council shall give that power to the CRB," said Kate Wilkinson, a CRB member and local attorney. "I'm not even clear the city attorney is our attorney; we're supposed to be an independent body."

Under the Eugene City Charter the city attorney, like the police chief, is the employee of the city manager who is given exclusive power to "appoint and remove all employees."

Wilkinson suggested independent Police Auditor Mark Gissiner get an independent legal opinion from his deputy auditor, who is an attorney.

But, Gissiner, who is not an attorney and argued falsely that city ordinances can overrule the City Charter, refused. "I'm not going to do that," Gissiner said he may include a suggestion in an overdue annual report that the City Council consider the issue.

In the past the council has relied on independent outside legal advice in overruling a city attorney legal interpretation that the city manager should control the supposedly independent city auditor's staff. — Alan Pittman

ORGANIC SALON OPENS DOORS

Eugene's first organic hair salon, Bria Downtown Hair Lounge, opens its doors Friday, April 2, as an alternative to more conventional, chemical-laden hair salons.

The link between processed, synthetic ingredients and a variety of diseases, has been shown in studies, and led Bria founder Maria Martin to envision a high-end salon free of the toxic beauty products often used for greater economic efficiency.

"I can look my client — who is undergoing chemotherapy for breast cancer — in the eyes and recommend our hair care and skin care products and services with a clear conscience, knowing they do not contain any of the ingredients that have been shown to link to diseases from cancer to violent allergic reactions," Martin said in a recent press release. "I would not want to be in this business if I couldn't do that."

Bria Downtown Hair Lounge is an expansion of Bria Bodycare, founded by Martin in 2007 as boutique-style organic spa. Martin and business partners Wynter Corcoran and Denise Shipp chose to expand Bria Bodycare to include salon services once space opened inside the historic Kennell Ellis building.

"We took all the best things about a salon and spa and put them in one place," Martin said. "We wanted to create a place that was enjoyable to experience, not just a place to get your hair done."

CHESTER

For many dog-years before he became a star on YouTube, Chester has been hanging out and making music with his surfing buddy Mike. "Me and Violet take care of the place when Mike goes away during the day," says Chester, introducing his older sis. "Except when the surf's up. That's when Mike and me hit the beach." A native of Harrisburg, where he worked in the orchard business, Chester relocated to Eugene at the age of eight weeks, when he signed a long-term contract with Mike and family. Even though his own favorite sport is fetch, he looks forward to frequent forays to the coast with Mike in their eternal quest for the Perfect Wave. Sometimes he paddles out into the surf, but mostly he keeps watch from the van, one paw on the 911 autodial button, while Mike ventures out on his board. "I used to watch from a towel on the beach," he explains. "Then one day a beach-patrol lady came along. She thought I would get a better view from the van." Chester admits that his musical inspiration comes from his namesake, Chester C. Burnett, better known as Howlin' Wolf. ## lighten up

Wow! Mike Bellotti gets $2.3 million from the university when he leaves? I guess they didn't have a pre-nuptial agreement. UO has hired an interim athletic director. It announced it will pay her a salary of $30,000 a month. Has anyone heard how much the university will pay her if she quits? — Raphael Aldave

In an effort to support local businesses, the hair lounge will display local artwork and retail locally made products, such as handmade soaps and gel nail enhancements.

Bria Downtown Hair Lounge, open Tuesday through Sunday at 1280 Willamette St., will feature a complimentary beverage list, wireless Internet access, and an art venue. Incorporated into Eugene's First Friday Art Walk, the grand opening of Bria Downtown Hair Lounge will take place from 3-7 pm April 2. — Deborah Bloom

COUGARS ON THE BUTTE?

The reported sighting of three cougars on Spencer Butte by two UO students March 17 wasn't an early April Fool's joke, but local predator advocate Brooks Fahy says local media from KVAL to The Register-Guard exaggerated the incident.

Though the students reported seeing the cats' eyes and tannish-brown coat and hearing growls, there was no physical evidence of cougars at the scene. "I was unable to locate a cougar track," says Brian Wolfer, the district wildlife biologist for the Oregon Department of Fish and Wildlife, who came to the butte after the students called the Eugene police.

"The best tracking conditions were along the trail edge," says Wolfer, "but the animals were sighted off the trails where tracking conditions were not ideal."

Fahy says it's a problem that "people now feel that they have to call the police when they see an animal that's supposed to be there." Cougars have been on the butte for thousands of years, Fahy says. The issue is teaching people how to coexist with wildlife, particularly in areas where urban dwellings are in close proximity to natural areas.

"I personally think they saw three deer," says Fahy, but regardless of what they saw, he says he's concerned that the media turn predators into objects of fear. "It's not that I don't believe cougars are there; they've been there," he says.

"When it comes to predators, sharks, grizzly bears, cougars wolves, we all want to feel like there's a sense of danger," Fahy says.

ODFW contributed to the sense of fear by putting signs up on Spencer Butte, Fahy says. "If they want to do that, they ought to put signs up all over."

A recent advertisement in the OSU Extension magazine for an April 1 informational meeting on cougars and coyotes in Lebanon, says, misleadingly, according to Fahy, "Cougar and coyote populations are increasing, and therefore damage to livestock has also been going up." Fahy says those population numbers for cougars are based on a heavily criticized computer model.

Last year, according to ODFW numbers, 45,375 hunting tags for cougars were sold. ODFW estimates there are around 5,700 cougars in the state. Once the quota for cougar hunting has been met in a given area, no more cougars can be legally killed that year, but Fahy says allowing so many tags to be sold leads to an attitude where "people when they see cougars, just shoot at them."

Rather than promote fear of cougars, Fahy says ODFW and the media should promote ways humans and predators can coexist.

The ODFW cougar and coyote informational meeting is April 1 at 7 pm at the Lebanon Library in the Community Meeting Room.

The UO Outdoor Program, Oregon Wild, and Cascadia Wildlands will be showing a film and discussing predators in the west at 7 pm April 8 at 180 PLC on campus. The film, Lords of Nature: Life in a Land of Great Predators, will be followed by a discussion panel with Russ Morgan, wolf biologist, ODFW; Bill Ripple, OSU professor in Forest Ecosystems and Society; and Rob Klavins, wildlands and wildlife advocate for Oregon Wild. ## IT'S ABOUT TIME

BY DAVID WAGNER

What is it about the call of a chickadee on a sunny morning that makes the heart sing? Love is in the air! How wonderful it is that these birds reside in town with us. I can't imagine having to live in a city neighborhood without chickadees and robins. It is good to pause and give thanks for winged joy.

With the equinox behind us, rapidly lengthening days have us roaring headlong towards summer. Spring is just getting up to full steam and it will be over before you know it.

The long dry period that characterizes our late summer has crowded the main flowering season into the next two months. It's time to dust off those field guides and polish the hand lenses.

Camas will be blooming by the end of the month. We have two kinds in this area, the giant camas of upland seepy slopes and the small camas of wetlands with standing water in winter. Camas was an important food source for the original inhabitants of the area. Roasted in pit ovens, it is sweet and nourishing. Boiled, however, it has the consistency of library paste.

Pay attention to your surroundings when hiking on the edges of civilization, you may see more wildlife than you expect. Cougars are being seen close to town more frequently. So far, no confrontations have occurred in our area. If you do encounter a cougar, do not turn and run. Open wide your jacket to make yourself look big and YELL.

SLANT

• Welcome to our April 1 issue. You should always believe everything you read in your newspaper because we journalists have long ago nailed down the truth. We always tell the full story; we never leave out relevant facts or contradictory information. We carefully fact-check concepts we don't understand, never cherry-pick our data, never sneak in our own biases, and always quote our sources accurately and fairly. We never ridicule idiotic ideas and hypocritical people, and we are never cynical. Trust us to provide you with the balanced information you need to be good citizens. April Fool!

• In the lawsuit against three Lane County commissioners, Coos County Circuit Court Judge Michael Gillespie has asked the plaintiffs to come up with actual evidence of violations of Oregon public meeting laws. We predict Ellie Dumdi and Edward Anderson won't come up with anything in the next two weeks and this case will be dismissed as frivolous. In this column Feb. 18 we suggested that this lawsuit is just a calculated political ploy to discredit three progressive commissioners. Don't be surprised if the same accusations pop up in campaigns to unseat the three commissioners, even if the case is tossed out for lack of evidence.

• Congressman Peter DeFazio said in his press conference in the U.S. Courthouse March 29 that health insurance reform is "very much a work in progress," and all of us who support single payer and/or a public option listened up. The health insurance industry has been listening, too. That's why they continue to fight so fiercely against this important bill which doesn't go far enough for progressives like our congressman, but is a substantial improvement for millions of Americans.

Health insurance executives and their public relations machine will spend jillions to head off more health care progress in this democracy. All the more reason for DeFazio to continue to fight to end the ridiculous anti-trust exemption the insurance industry now holds. In his press conference, he said 406 members of the House voted to put an end to this exemption in the health care bill, but the measure disappeared in the Senate sausage machine. He has promises from Sen. Patrick Leahy that the issue will come up again, and if it does, Pete is confident that the votes will be there.

• The seventh anniversary of the Iraq War and occupation was March 20 and passed without much notice. Bush's senior advisor Karl Rove is still trying to defend this catastrophe. He claimed on national TV recently that the sacrifices were worth deposing Saddam Hussein. Really? The war so far has cost the lives of 4,390 U.S. military personnel and more than 1,100 U.S. contractors, and drained more than $714 billion of our national treasure. Nearly 32,000 American soldiers have been seriously injured and many will be on medical disability for the rest of their lives. In Iraq, the loss of lives, property and infrastructure is beyond comprehension. An estimated 1.2 million Iraqis have died as a result of our invasion and the civil war that followed. And we've made countless new enemies around the world.

We agree with Ramparts Editor David Horowitz that the invasion of Iraq was the "worst decision by a U.S. president in history." And we are still there with boots on the ground, blood in the dust and bucks in the wind.

He's got an Airstream trailer and a Holstein cow
He still makes whiskey 'cause he still knows how

— James McMurtry, 'Choctaw Bingo'

by Camilla Mortensen

Craigslist after midnight isn't the best idea for those of us who can be a bit impulsive. You can find everything on that online flea market from cute puppies to rental housing to truly frightening personal ads. Me? I found an Airstream.

One day I'm living in an apartment in downtown Eugene; a couple shots of whiskey on sleepless night and a quick haul with my biodiesel-powered truck later, and all of a sudden I'm parked out in a field somewhere living in a vintage 29-foot 1975 Airstream Ambassador.

Except for those cold mornings when it's below 50 degrees inside my trailer and I'm hiding under my blankets crossing my freezing fingers that the propane water heater (also vintage) didn't go out in the middle of the night and I can warm up with a hot shower, it's pretty awesome. Those less awesome mornings I call it the Air-cicle. Airstreams are solidly built, but not exactly well insulated inside that aluminum shell.

Living in a silver Twinkie makes for interesting conversations and a reliable way of weeding out the wrong guy on a first date. You get one of three reactions when you answer the question of, "So where do you live?" with "In an Airstream trailer."

First there's "What's an Airstream?" which is a sure sign he's been living under a rock for his whole life, and that's not good. Then there's the look of vague horror some guys get, leading me to suspect he's picturing pink flamingos, Christmas lights up all year and pit bulls (which isn't far from the truth, really). And then there's the best reaction, "An Airstream? Cool! I've always wanted an Airstream."

That last reaction is one many of us have: I've always wanted an Airstream. Airstreams appeal to hipsters and retirees, kids, teens and those of us who read Tom Robbins and thought it would be cool to live in a vehicle altered to look like a giant roast turkey. New or used, people haul them, live in them, fix them up or sometimes just fixate on them.

Airstream Sales Central

After I got my Airstream, the need for things like sewage hoses and electrical attachment thingies led me to discover that Eugene is something of an Airstream epicenter thanks to Sutton RV. Sutton's the biggest Airstream dealer on the West Coast, and the second largest Airstream dealer, not only in the nation but in the world, according to sales manager Eric Benson. Yup, that's right, in the world. Sutton RV is only seven silver bullet-shaped recreational vehicles away from world Airstream domination.

Benson says Sutton RV keeps 50 to 60 shiny new Airstreams on its lot out on West 7th and sells out that inventory each month. Used Airstreams purchased by Sutton or taken in trade, he says, are almost always already spoken for. They rarely make it to the lot before they're sold. And believe me, Airstreams are selling these days.

"The downturn in the economy brought more people to the Airstream lifestyle," says Benson.

While the R-G's reporting the downer news of the massive motor home industry being driven to near extinction by the crashing economy — locally, Monaco Coach filed for bankruptcy in March 2009 and Country Coach was liquidated late last year — EW's here to tell you that Airstream sales have taken a rebound. The Wall Street Journal reported in March that Airstream's parent company, Thor, just posted its "third straight quarter of dramatically improved results."

Turns out that people like me, rather than buying homes, are taking the Airstream option. Actually, people like me, under-paid newly born retro-trailer trash, are buying older Airstreams found on Craigslist or eBay for a couple thousand dollars, not those $30,000 to $90,000 brand new 'Streams, complete with garage and flat screen TV, though other people indeed are buying them fresh off the factory floor in Jackson Center, Ohio, and sent direct to Eugene via Sutton.

The spike in Airstream sales is not in spite of the bad economy; it's because of the bad economy. The more wealthy RV snowbird types are buying Airstreams too, the new ones, with the interior bamboo accents and oil-rubbed bronze fixtures. (My own 1975 'Stream is rocking the plastic shelving and orange and hot pink polyester look.)

For a while there, Baby Boomers were tooling around the country in their opulent Class A motor homes priced in the mid-range at $250,000 to $300,000, and those beasts sucked up gas like it was a renewable resource. But after the economy crashed, Benson says, "they remembered their camping days in their old Westphalia camper and wanted to do the right thing."

So as the economy tanked, people downsized, opting for getting rid of their massive RVs and giant tow vehicles and buying smaller SUVs to haul smaller, somewhat less expensive, trailers, Benson says. When that nostalgia for simpler times kicks in, Airstreams start looking cooler than ever, simple to deal with and well made. Mary Kulish of Eugene, who organized an Airstream Rally in Coburg March 19-21, says the way an Airstream hauls "is very aerodynamic and especially for women, or anybody, traveling alone, they're very easy to tow." Some even say, that if you're truly eco-minded, you can tow an Airstream with a bicycle.

Having pulled my nearly 30-foot Airstream down Highway 126, with only my dogs as co-pilots, I have to agree with Kulish. And not only does it tow easily (with my truck, anyway; I haven't tested the bike theory yet), it just plain looks cool with its sleek silver sides and retro-tin can shape. I can't pull into a gas station without having at least one conversation about my quirky silver trailer.

The distinctive aluminum Airstream shape, Benson says, makes it "more than just a trailer. To many of my customers, it's a piece of art."

For some 'Streamers the art aspect means that the slightest dent needs to be "re-skinned" and polished. For others, "A dent, that's part of its charm," says Benson. My Airstream has some charm in a couple of places.

People from all over the country send their Airstreams to Sutton RV to be worked on, says Benson. Most of the work they do is re-skinning. Each Airstream is made with 4,000 rivets, hand placed, and it takes two people to set each rivet in each one of an Airstream's aluminum sections. Airstreams have a lot of sections.

It's no coincidence that Airstreams look a little like airplane fuselages; Airstreams originated via an airplane design. According to some travel-trailer historians, Airstream founder and visionary Wally Byam, born in Baker City, was sent by his grandfather as a teenager to herd a flock of sheep in summer pastures high in the mountains of Oregon for months at a time. Byam supposedly lived out of a small, two-wheeled wagon covered with cloth and hauled by a donkey. It was this that led to his later fascination with the art of trailer living.

Before there were Airstreams, a company named Bowlus Trailers made travel trailers created by aircraft designer William Hawley Bowlus. Bowlus worked on Charles Lindbergh's record setting airplane, "The Spirit of St. Louis," and based his sleek, aerodynamic designs on the airplanes he knew so well. Bowlus Trailers closed shop in 1936, after which Byam, who had worked with Bowlus, began designing and producing aluminum trailers of his own based on the Bowlus model. The torpedo-shaped Airstreams have been around ever since, and according to Airstream, Inc., two thirds of the Airstreams made since the 1930s are still on the road or otherwise in use. People love them.

Benson says once someone buys an Airstream, they are considered "ruined in the industry because they'll never buy another kind of trailer or RV."

Airstream Rally

Once you have an Airstream, whether you meant to or not, you've joined the club. And if you do want to join an actual club, there are plenty to choose from. The Tin Can Tourists is for lovers of vintage trailers of all makes and models, from Airstream, Argosy and Bowlus to Silver Streak and Winnebago. The Northwest 'Streamers (all aluminum — all the time!) gathers Airstream lovers from across the Pacific Northwest and into Canada for rallies and trailer talk, and for those who really want to hitch up with Airstream history, there's the Wally Byam Caravan Club International.

The WBCCI was founded in 1955 and is still going strong. "The Wally Byam is sort of a step, once you get an Airstream" says Mary Kulish. "It's the general club for all Airstreamers."

Once you join the WBCCI, you become part of a unit and can also participate in intracamps, says Kulish, like the one for vintage Airstream owners or — everybody's favorite — "The Free Wheelers," a group for Airstream singles.

The Oregon unit counts among its membership 100-year-old Eugenean Ed Tracy and his 99-year-old wife Vivian, says Kulish. Tracy's final trip was only six years ago, when at the age of 96 he pulled his 'Stream over the Willamette Pass on a hunting trip with his grandson. Though not hauling an Airstream, the Tracys came to the recent WBCCI rally in Coburg to join in the travel-trailer festivities.

Teresa Taylor, the proud owner of a '68 Ambassador that she hauled to the rally, says "Airstream people seem to live a long time; they're very active." Taylor and her husband, Glenn, live in their Airstream half the year, spending the remainder of the year out on frequent camping trips.

According to Taylor, back in the '60s and '70s, owning an Airstream was a status symbol. "If you look back to the membership, it had doctors and lawyers, that kind of group."

These days, Airstream owners and ralliers are from all walks of life and all ages, Taylor says. She's an interior designer in her 60s, though she says that rally participants range in age from younger Nike execs to older retirees.

Full disclosure: I'm from the low-budget Airstream walk of life. I didn't bring my Airstream to the rally, partly because I was a little afraid of looking like a white trash Airstream newbie with my unpolished trailer and plastic interior, and partly because the thing is currently kind of stuck in the mud where I have it parked, or, more accurately, planted.

One thing Airstream rallies do is inspire 'Streamers to fix up their silver wagons. There's nothing like poking around in other people's dolled up Airstreams to stir up a little Airstream envy. "It's like having a little playhouse," says Teresa Taylor, who left the American walnut interior of her '68 Ambassador unaltered, but sewed curtains for it and reupholstered the beds and sofa. We both agreed, as long as we're playing house, Ikea, with its focus on small living quarters, is pretty cool for picking up Airstream decorator items.

Some of the larger rallies, like the upcoming 53rd International WBCCI Convention this June in Gillette, Wyo., have contests judging vintage Airstreams, while other rallies simply provide the opportunity to hang out, shoot the Airstream breeze and peek into other folks' travel trailers. "Anybody who owns an Airstream and you go into a park and see one, 99.9 percent of the time, if you asked to look inside or something, you're more than welcome to," says Kulish.

Brad and Susan Taylor (no relation to Teresa's) 1958 Flying Cloud draws a crowd everywhere they go. "I saved it out of a farmer's field," Brad says, "and my wife fell in love with it." Brad says no sooner had he towed the thing home, full of junk from being used as someone's storage shed for years, than Susan "went in the house and signed us up for a rally five weeks out."

Brad Taylor was able to use his background restoring classic cars to bring the Flying Cloud back to its former glory. Now, says Susan, "It's our little escape pod." While Brad did the restoration work, she did the interior painting and upholstery. Thanks to Susan, I have discovered that you can make cool Airstream curtains while living in an Airstream without a sewing machine. When you live and work in a 29-foot long, eight-foot wide giant hotdog, space is at a premium. The secret, Susan told me, is the Stitch Witch tape. This, I learned, is also why you go to rallies: to learn the secrets of Airstreaming.

The Covers, the Dreamers and Me

"It's the camaraderie," says Brad Taylor of the Airstream way of life. He calls the upsurge in Airstream interest "the rebirth of the trailerite." Airstream lovers at rallies also welcome the Airstream dreamers, those of you who don't have a 'Stream, don't know where you'd put it if you got it, but want one anyway, or want to think about wanting one. And for the true Airstream-o-phile, owner or non-owner, there's the online Airstream Forums (www.airforums.com), page after (web)page of 'Streamers talking travel trailers.

The Airstream Forums are a lifejacket for those of us who jumped blindly into Airstream ownership without knowing how to swim. You can get advice on full timing (living in your 'Stream all year), boondocking (extended Airstream living, often off the grid), camping and hauling, and general Airstream repair. Airstreams are built solidly, this is true, but if anyone tells you they don't leak, trust me, they're lying. They leak. And if you live in Eugene, they leak often.

The Airstream Forums are also where the Airstream dreamers go to get their silver travel trailer fix without actually buying one. Many of those people, who wish they had an Airstream but don't, know more about the trailers than I do. "Oh, a 1975," said one such aficionado I chatted with one day with a sneer, "the Beatrice Food years." Turns out that along with having such uncool and '70s-esque things like plastic, polyester and, horror of horrors, twin beds, my beloved trailer was made after Wally Byam's death in 1962 and before the company was purchased by Thor. "Yeah, well," I thought to myself, "I have an Airstream and you don't."

David Levin, a UO math professor, is among the Airstream dreamers in town. He plans to get one when he retires, even if that might be a long ways away. "Airstreams are beautiful," he says.

"I'm a bit retro in all my tastes," says Levin, "things that are well made, well designed." Though, as an academic, he can't help but wonder: "How many bookshelves can you fit into an Airstream?"

As a book geek with disorganized tendencies, I can't tell you how many bookshelves you can fit; mine came with three built in, and those are packed full, but I can attest that a couple of stray books in an Airstream is practically a book avalanche. Actually, a couple of stray anything in an Airstream is an avalanche.

Despite the cold mornings, twin beds, leaks and space so limited my dogs have to jump onto the bed so I can walk down the hall to use the bathroom, I've got no plans to move out of my Airstream and cash in my Airstream dream anytime soon. Right now, I'm looking forward to warm spring nights, sprawled on my orange polyester sofa, drinking cheap $6 champagne and watching the sunset through the curved oval door of my 'Stream. I've been told that if I do decide to move out, Airstreams hold their value, and I'll be able to get back what I paid for it. But like a lot of other Airstreamers, if I do sell mine, it will only be to get another one. Once you've joined the club, you're in for life. As Wally Byam once said, "Let's not make changes — only improvements."

A movie geek and unrepentant pothead, Doug Benson happened into stand-up as a dare and, over the years, has made a name for himself as a stoner comedian whose credits include the mock-documentary Super High Me and The Marijuana-Logues. It would be a mistake, however, to lump the comedian's shtick in with the mongo-joint, THC-addled, East L.A. antics of Cheech & Chong. Benson is more awkward average guy than slangy surfer dude, and his routines tend toward the smartly ironic, self-deprecating humor of such latter-day comedians as John Stewart and Zach Galifianakis. And, as with the best stand-up comedy from Lenny Bruce to Chris Rock, Benson uses his smoky persona as a subtle wedge into all sorts of social issues. # SWEET SUCCESS

The Divine Cupcake opens Eugene's first cupcakery BY AMANDA BURHOP

Divine Cupcake owner Emily Downing-Moore says the at-home bakery business was bursting at its kitchen seams when Downing-Moore and her husband, Thaddeus Moore, decided to open a retail cafe where people could eat delicious organic cupcakes, place large orders and drink specialty coffees and teas. "We've been planning this shop since we started the business in 2007," Downing-Moore says. "We just didn't know when the time would be right and when we'd be able to afford it." For the Moores, the time finally came this spring.

Divine Cupcake, which serves organic and vegan cupcakes, found a home in West Eugene, on the corner of 11th and Chambers, in early March 2010. If you're not careful, you might drive right by it. But once you lay eyes on the lime green building with a baby blue business sign, you won't soon forget it.

Inside is a beautiful, multileveled display of cupcakes ranging from Monkey Trap, a chocolate cake with orange buttercream frosting, to Lime n' a Coconut, a coconut cake with lime buttercream frosting. Since opening the shop, the couple has added some new items to their lineup.

"We are experimenting with new flavors all the time and have added some breakfast muffins for the morning crowd that wants something less sweet," Downing-Moore says. "Biscotti and scones are also going to be making an appearance very soon."

According to Downing-Moore, the most exciting addition to the business is the organic espresso and tea selections. "We have an artisan brewed coffee/gourmet tea menu that makes suggestions for cupcakes that would taste the best when paired with a particular drink. We are blessed with amazing baristas," Downing-Moore says.

Another benefit of the retail space is a bigger kitchen and the ability to offer people more variety and convenience. And so far, customers are enjoying the new shop. "We are very fortunate to have a large following that has developed over the past three years, and now that we are more accessible it's growing," Downing-Moore says. "We couldn't be happier!" ■

THE PERFECT PORTABLE FOOD

Pasties, Eugene style WORDS BY DARCY WALLACE | PHOTOS BY TRASK BEDORTHA

Ever wanted to try a Cornish pasty? The delectable combination of meat and vegetables wrapped up inside a dough crust? You must have had a hard time, since hardly anyone's served them in Eugene. Until now.

Cousin Jack's Pasty Co. specializes in the traditional Cornish pasty — and every variation you can think of. Owners Dave Clark and Kim Gibson make up to 800 pasties per day, but unlike many other frozen food makers, they use only local ingredients whenever possible, such as Tillamook cheddar, beef from Knee Deep Cattle Co. and vegetables grown in Lane and Linn counties.

The pasty (that's pronounced past-ie, not pay-stie) was eaten by Cornish miners hundreds of years ago and later by Finnish miners as well. Workers needed a hearty meal to last the day since they often couldn't leave until the day's work was done. The solution was to bake meat and vegetables left over from dinner inside dough, a little like a calzone or a meat pie. The dough kept food warm for hours, and miners could eat the filling and throw away the crust, since their hands would be covered in minerals and arsenic after working half the day.

The crusts, Gibson says, were offerings to the spirits of the mines, who in return might give the workers protection. Pasties often had beef, potatoes and either rutabagas or turnips depending on region. Carrots, however, are a major subject of debate.

"We do put carrots into two of our pasties because they're so delicious," Gibson says. She also says peas are sometimes considered taboo as well.

When Gibson and Clark met, they discovered some commonalities. Clark worked in the restaurant industry and Gibson had several years of experience running Lochmead Dairy. She says Clark lived in England, where pasties were as prolific as hamburgers in the U.S., for a year and a half. He found it odd that, despite their immense popularity overseas, pasties were so rare in Oregon. "We decided now is the time for Eugene to have pasties," she says.

An average day at Cousin Jack's begins with the dough. They use flour and butter with organic palm shortening, but the unique ingredient is orange juice, which Gibson says makes the crust extra flaky. The dough is then divided into rounds and rolled up, ready to be filled. The next day, employees dice up vegetables, potatoes, mushrooms and any other ingredients for whatever pasties they're making that day. The mixture gets scooped into the dough rounds and "sealed" inside with turnover hand-crank machines, then cooked and frozen for shipment to local, organic food stores. Gibson says she can make about 80 at once and 400-800 in a day, depending on the number of ingredients and complexity of the recipe. But these aren't assembly-line Hot Pockets: Cousin Jack's makes broccoli and cheese, cheeseburger, pesto lamb and Steak n' Ale pasties, among several others. Steak for the Steak n' Ale marinates in Ninkasi Oats Stout, and in return the Ninkasi tasting room sells some of Cousin Jack's pasties. "The barter system is alive and well in Eugene!" Gibson says.

Clark is a fanatic about pasty history, which he says dates back over 800 years. Some Cornish citizens claim ownership of the pasty, and they say it mustn't have carrots. But inhabitants of Devon say their recipe came 100 years earlier, and carrots are perfectly acceptable.

Another big deal, Clark says, is how one crimps the pasty dough: It's either along the top, as made in Devon, or, according to Cornish tradition, along the side. Pasties go back to the days of Shakespeare, who referenced them in some of his plays. Pasties were even part of the lives of some Round Table knights. Almost every country seems to have their version of the pasty, from meat pies to the Russian pirozhki to mass-produced Hot Pockets. With Cousin Jack's, you can have your pasty and eat it too. ■

Cousin Jack's pasties are available hot at the UO's Court Café, Gary's Coffee, Max's, the Ninkasi Tasting Room and local Dari-Marts. You can find them in the freezer case at Capella, The Kiva, Friendly Street Market, Long's, Market of Choice, New Frontier, Red Barn and Sundance. Cousin Jack's also has a stand at the Lane County Farmers' Market. For more info and a complete list of outlets, see www.cousinjackspasty.com

THE REAL DEAL

Trying a trio of tacos in the Whit

WORDS BY RICK LEVIN | PHOTOS BY TRASK BEDORTHA

It goes without saying that Americanized tacos are at best a perversion of what you'll find anywhere south of the Rio Grande, and at worst a violation of all that's held sacred in Latin American cuisine. Form fitted, deep fried and typically slathered in cheddar cheese, our fast food version of the taco is essentially an oversized corn chip that doubles as a glorified spoon — a convenient vehicle for shoveling spiced ground beef, iceberg lettuce, quartered tomatoes and heaps of sour cream down our gullets. And, similar to the anti-Italian idiocy of deep-dish pizza with cheese infused crust, taco mock-innovation doesn't always stop there. Slather that half-moon monstrosity in refried beans and wrap it up in a soft tortilla, as some enterprising corporate chains have done, and you've got a comestible of low class and high chicanery.

Pancho Villa is rolling over in his grave while the ghost of Frida Kahlo weeps.

A simple and fairly reliable test of authenticity, then, goes like this: If it crunches when you take a bite, it's a friggin' sandwich, not a taco. A real taco — the kind you'll find everywhere from Guadalajara to Puerto Escondido and beyond — is open-faced and gloriously messy, and if it is garnished with cheese at all it's usually with the white, crumbly, feta-like queso blanco variety made in Oaxaca. The tortillas are small, soft and made of corn; they are often doubled, one stacked atop the other, and topped with a simple concoction, usually beans and some type of meat so well cooked it's nearly reverted to its carbon state. Sometime there's shredded lettuce or a bit of cilantro, or a few diced tomatoes. The most common and popular taco variety, and a staple of Mexican lunches throughout the country, are tacos al pastor, which are made with marinated pork carved from a huge orbital hunk of meat on a spit grill similar to that used in Mediterranean cooking (in fact, the shawarma grill was introduced to Northern Mexico by Lebanese immigrants). When in doubt, order tacos al pastor. Or, by all means, get adventurous: other types of taco toppings run the gamut from carnitas (beef) and pollo (chicken), to lengua (tongue), pescado (fish) and tripa (tripe). Generally, if it's meat — including goat brains — you can put it on a taco.

Eugene, like many cities in the Pacific Northwest, is blessed with a multitude of places where folks who have the hunger can land a plateful of muy autentico tacos. Whether it be the parking lot taco wagon or the cafeteria of a Mexican market, it's possible to tie into a tasty bite of traditional Latin American cuisine, and for not much more than you'd pay in Mexico. At a buck or buck-and-a-half per, tacos are a bargain, and a quick meal to boot. Three will usually do you just right, while also offering you the opportunity to mix and match. Tongue, fish and pork? Beef, chicken and tripe? The possibilities are endless, and infinitely thrilling. As they say in Mexico: Así es la vida, or such is life, and what better way to grab el toro by the horns than putting away a taco or three.

EL PINCHE TACO

The Whiteaker neighborhood provides several options for the discerning taco eater. One of the best outfits is the relatively new and hilariously named El Pinche Taco, which translates, slang-wise, to "The Fucking Taco" (pinche literally means "kitchen boy," or the person who cleans up after the chef, which only adds depth to this restaurant's awesome name). So here's the pinche lowdown: Located on the east side of Blair between 5th and 6th, El Pinche Taco offers indoor as well as sidewalk seating, and it has that unmistakable ambiance — tight quarters, bright colors and the heady smell of food cooked in lard (as it should be, hardened arteries be damned) — that's the trademark of street-side cafes in big cities like Guadalajara and Mexico, D.F. Owned and operated by Guadalajara native Juan Dominguez, Pinche is the real deal — uncompromised and uncompromising Mexican food made old-style but with an urbanized, no-frills flair. It's hard to go wrong with anything on Pinche's substantial menu, but if you want to get a taste of what the place does best, go for the taco triumvirate: steak, pork and tongue. The latter, if you can get past the idea of chewing on another animal's taste buds, takes the prize for tenderness; braised to perfection, lengua is soft, slightly chewy meat with a subtle, somewhat gamey flavor that is probably most similar to a fatty bite of sirloin. The al pastor at Pinche is wonderful, just right, but for my money the hands-down winner among the three is el bistek. Well done and perfectly seasoned, the steak taco is the pinche bomb — an unrepentantly carnivorous delight that is only made that much tastier chased with an ice-cold swig of Negro Modelo.

MARGARITA'S

Situated on the outskirts of Whiteaker, Margarita's on First and Jefferson is well worth the hike. This taco wagon (or rather wagons, both painted forest green) is named after owner Josea Bescerra's mother, whose recipes he reproduces with obvious filial fidelity. Opened just a few months back, Margarita's menu is classic taco wagon fare, and includes everything from the standard al pastor to carnitas and fish tacos. Right down to the doubled up corn tortillas mounded with beans and meat, Bescerra's simple, elegant food is true to his Guadalajara roots. The al pastor is tangy, and the beef is cooked to a delightful crisp. Servings are generously mounded onto each taco, so much so that each bite spills on the plate, making a fork a pleasant necessity. And although everything is excellent, it is the chorizo, or spicy pork sausage, taco that raises Margarita's fare to another level altogether. The chorizo, with its complex flavors and crisp/soft texture, delivers a kick and will leave your hands smelling like sausage for the rest of the day. This is one case of heartburn you won't regret.

MI TIERRA

Mi Tierra is located on one side of the Blairmuda Triangle between 8th and 7th. Nearing its first year serving the Whiteaker community, this café offers an array of 99-cent tacos as well as combination plates. Owner Ezequiel Salgado, a Michoacan native, also operates the market/deli next door, where he makes his own chorizo. And what delectable chorizo it is: salty-spicy and showing the deep orange hue that is the sign of good Mexican sausage, this chorizo makes for an utterly satisfying taco. The asada taco, topped with fresh onions and cilantro, carries a delicate balance of seasoning, and if the particular batch I sampled proved a tad tough, it was hardly anything to blow the works. Mi Tierra's al pastor taco is an eye-opener for anyone acquainted only with more traditional pork tacos; with a hint of pineapple, this topping has a refreshingly fruity, slightly sweet flavor — a nice Hawaiian-style change-up of an old standby. But the real surprise was the birria taco, which is made with goat (chivo) meat. Wildly tender and marbled with a succulent fat, the birria taco is — to trot out a dog-eared culinary cliché — melt-in-your-mouth delicious, revealing layer upon layer of flavor with each successive chew. With Mi Tierra (meaning "My Land") offering such inexpensive and completely honest food as this, it's a wonder the Taco Bell just down the road on 8th hasn't closed its doors in shame. ■

STOREHOUSE PIZZA

Eugene's latest pizza and pasta eatery, the Granary Pizza Co., uses the historic silo in which it's located as a kind of inspiration.

Owner Joshua Keim named his new restaurant as a way to reflect how granaries played a central key in the day-to-day life of communities in the past — and how he would like to see his restaurant also influence Eugene someday.

"The idea of a granary is a special one to me because it's the storehouse of the community's wealth," says Keim, who also owns Ring of Fire, Café Lucky Noodle and Club Snafu, a bar and dance club. "[It's also] the storehouse of a community's energy and resources."

The historical building which the Granary Pizza calls home has been completely remodeled while keeping the original skeleton of the silo intact. The previous business to call the space home, Jo Federigo's, closed due to the rough economy, but Keim says he's hopeful for the success of the Granary Pizza. High vaulted ceilings and warm lighting create a comfortable atmosphere.

"I love pizza," Keim says. "It's simple cooking, it's unpretentious and it's a fun food medium to work in."

Customers can also treat themselves to a full bar downstairs, a wine bar upstairs and a menu that features more than just pizza. "Our house calamari is pretty awesome," Keim says. "But the pizzas are really our specialty."

The Granary Pizza's head chef is Jason Hagan, who was Ring of Fire's head chef for 12 years. He is also partnering with Keim in this new restaurant.

The restaurant, like its predecessor, hosts a broad array of music events. Keim says that the Granary Pizza hopes to become a new venue for local performers.

"It's a colorful atmosphere downstairs," Keim says. Smaller rooms in the restaurant have themes; one is a Japanese style seating area. The alcoves downstairs, he says, also create an opium den-like atmosphere with colored lighting and cloistered booth seating.

Joshua Keim

The Granary Pizza plans to create meals using local and sustainable ingredients. The restaurant's pizza crust is made from Sheppard's Grain, which is the result of several Northwest family farms practicing sustainable agriculture.

"Sustainability is one of our main goals as a business," Keim says. "We also want to create connections with local farmers."

Currently, the Granary Pizza Co. is open Wednesday through Sunday. Minors are allowed downstairs until 10 pm and upstairs until 11 pm. 259 E. 5th Ave. (541) 343-8488. — Kaitlin Flanigan

THE HEART OF COBURG ROAD

Organic and tasty coffee in an unlikely venue

A few weeks ago, I picked up our theater freelancer for a trip to Ashland. We needed a quick pick-me-up for the Friday afternoon drive, so we stopped at an unnamed coffee place along Coburg Road. The wait was about 20 minutes for a latte — and the latte was one of the worst I've ever tasted.

If only we had known about Bedrocks Organic Coffee! The small, charming but hip spot, right by Chipotle and near Café 440 in the Coburg Station area, serves up tasty espresso in a timely fashion.

Owners Casie and Josh Rodriguez say that's part of their purpose, but they're also devoted to the idea of an environmentally friendly business. The coffee's organic, and so are many of the syrups. When Josh opens the door to the refrigerator in the back room, the shelves are filled with organic cartons from Umpqua Dairy, organic butter and bottles of Genesis Juice, not to mention other ingredients for smoothies.

When they can't go organic, they go local. Sweet Life goodies line the pastry case, and as Eugeneans know, Sweet Life uses as many organic and local ingredients as possible in their fantastic products.

The furniture — funky, a little space age, a little mix'n'match — comes from a store in Bend, where the couple own another coffee shop. The furniture store was going out of business, so "We bought everything marked 'green' or 'eco,'" Casie says. The floor and beams, Josh says, will be recognizable to anyone who ever stopped at the old Northside Liquor: This is the same building, reworked to code. (Northside has a new storefront in Coburg Station.) Spots at the bar allow the baristas and customers to interact, while a fireplace and digital screens freely mix cozy and technological.

Like their place in Bend, Bedrocks Organic Coffee in Eugene has a drive-through window. The parking lot system is a bit unwieldy, the owners agree, but they think it will catch on as more people know there's drive-through coffee available on their way to (or home from) work. The baristas wear headsets as if they're working at a fast-food place, but when they pull shots from the La Marzocco machines (with special "paddle" controls), they don't rush. "We don't pull shots early or steam our milk before people arrive," Josh says. "We do it when you get here."

Weekly staffers who bought Americanos and lattes enjoyed the strength of the shots, both caffeinated and not, and those who like non-dairy will appreciate the lack of what the owners call "upcharge" for cow milk alternatives.

Right now, the small spot offers 30 minutes of free WiFi for those who purchase coffee, and that's partly because of the space, they say. Though the store is located on the busy, car-laden Coburg Road, the couple says they get a lot of neighborhood foot traffic from the Cal Young-area houses that lie behind the business complex. They're planning some outside seating for the summer and working on getting a liquor license so that they can serve Ninkasi and Oakshire beers and maybe some local wines as well.

The store's hours have been adjusted lately; Josh says they opened at 5 am for a while, but it wasn't a time when enough people came by, so now Bedrocks revs up at 6 am. When they get that liquor license, the couple says, their goal is to be open until midnight a few days a week. Follow them on Twitter (bedrockscoffee) or on Facebook (Bedrocks Organic Coffee) for a lot more info and to give them feedback about what you'd like to see in the store.

This store has only been open since mid-January, but they dream of having more stores and taking the concept bigger. "We're a work in progress," Casie says. ■

Aline "Momma" Austin and Marian Austin

CHEWING THE FAT

Momma's Kitchen brings barbecue to downtown Springfield WORDS BY AARON RAGAN-FORE | PHOTOS BY TODD COOPER

Entering Momma's Kitchen, one of the first things to catch my eye is a gleaming white host station, styled a bit like a church pulpit. The walls are a matching pure white, adorned with a framed print depicting an energetic African-American church service. Contemporary gospel music blares from a boom box by the kitchen.

With a restaurant that seems to be so much about the churchgoing experience, it's amazing that Aline "Momma" Austin and Marian Austin, the mother-daughter team behind the Eugene-Springfield area's newest Southern-style eatery, once served food in a nightclub. Aline Austin used to prepare and sell soul food at the Taboo club, now The Blueprint. "She couldn't do the nightlife," Marian says of her mother. "Her friends couldn't even come there at all. She's a churchgoing woman."

The personable, gray-haired Aline does seem an unlikely candidate for sling-ing hash in a late-night hotspot. Originally from Alabama, Aline married a man from Texas, creating an impeccable pedigree for her barbecue. She imported her cooking chops, and her family, to Safford, Ariz., a small city just two hours to the north-east of Tucson. That's where Aline raised Marian, along with her five sisters and three brothers.

"We lived in a little community where all the African-American people lived," a place called Little Hollywood, Marian says. "That was all we grew up with: Southern dishes, Southern food. We didn't know it was a delicacy" until they moved to Oregon in 1985, following Marian's eldest sister.

Here in the Willamette Valley, Marian decorated cakes for a living, while her mother worked as a care provider for senior citizens. Aline noted that some of her elderly charges lost their appetites as they aged, but "When she cooked, they ate," reports Marian.

The nightclub location followed, but the opening of the current Momma's Kitchen in June of last year, in a space formerly occupied by a St. Vincent de Paul at the corner of Main and 5th in Springfield, feels truer to Aline Austin's roots and clientele.

A word about the menu. Growing up as I did in North Carolina, I have eaten my share of fried okra and hush puppies. So I admit I probably do set the bar a bit high when it comes to soul food. Highlights of the restaurant's offerings include tasty nutmeg yams and collard greens every bit as pungent as I remember them from my grandmother's stovetop.

But the Momma's menu needs to work out some of its kinks when it comes to entrées and desserts, both of which tend toward the bland side. If you're going to consume something that heavy, you kind of want it to be worth the calories.

Soul food seems to be the trend of the moment, as Thai food was at the turn of the century. Americans' rediscovery of their own palate of the past has fueled a rise in barbecue joints in the Eugene-Springfield area. "Our taste is different from most regular food. It makes you feel good," Marian says by way of explanation. "Southern food is comfort food." Perhaps we the People are seeking a bit of comfort amid wartime, legislative bickering and economic recession.

As for the Austins, the family has big plans for their business. They already offer catering, and this spring they plan to expand the menu to include breakfast. ■

GO WEST, GO HEALTHY

Healthy food on West 11th Avenue WORDS BY VANESSA SALVIA | PHOTO BY TRASK BEDORTHA

Drive past all of the fast food places on West 11th. Go on. Keep going. Turn into Go Healthy Café for an extensive menu of organic, gluten-free and vegan salads, sandwiches, burritos and bowls. You won't be the only one to pass by the burgers and fries.

On a recent mid-week afternoon, when most adults were still ensconced in their cubicles and high-schoolers were mentally willing the dismissal bell to ring, Go Healthy Café was packed. Nearly all of the tables were full, one with a solitary older man doing a crossword puzzle, one with a couple of professional-looking women chatting over tea and a treat, one with a mom and young child bonding over oversized carved X's and O's for tic tac toe piled in a box just inside the door. A cheerful cashier took orders for coffee while another made a fruit smoothie. The scene was typical of the range of customers that owner Travis Miller has been serving since Go Healthy Café opened on Jan. 21 last year. "The first six months, the phrase that I heard the most was, 'Finally, something other than fast food on West 11th!'" he says.

In January, Food Network Magazine profiled Miller as an up-and-coming young entrepreneur. Only 25 now, Miller first opened a coffee shop called My Coffee in the same space five years ago. "I started out young," he says, "and was just trying to do something that fills the day. I fell in love with the environment, the atmosphere, of coffee shops in college. I always hung out in coffee shops. But coffee as a business is limiting as far as what you can do with it." My Coffee sold four pre-made sandwiches, but when Miller re-launched as Go Healthy Café with a new menu, those were abolished. "Now we do everything made to order, all from scratch," he says.

That change partly came about due to Miller being diagnosed with celiac disease one and a half years ago. "When I got diagnosed, my life stopped because I couldn't eat out, and when I did eat out, no one really understood what it meant to be gluten-free," he says. "It was a real big hassle, and I just said, 'Wow, we really need to make something available for myself and consumers who have the same issue.'" The café now has a full gluten-free menu in addition to a regular menu. The café's bread is freshly baked locally by The Bread Stop, chicken and turkey are all natural, and tofu and tempeh is local and organic, made by Surata Soyfoods. "We use as many organic ingredients as price will allow," Miller says, "and our greens are always organic."

The café is the first in the Eugene area to be certified by the Gluten Intolerance Group of North America (gluten.net). "I wanted to make it as convenient as possible for people to be able to trust and have confidence in a restaurant," he says. "All my employees go through a very extensive gluten-free training program, which I developed, so they're aware." Miller speaks of people confessing that they haven't eaten a sandwich in years because they couldn't find a gluten-free option. "We forget the value of a sandwich or the convenience of going to a restaurant and ordering off the menu," he says. "It's been really touching for me because it seems like I'm really changing people's lives through food, like we're on the right track with something here."

While the gluten-free menu is a growing percentage of their business, Miller says that the café has attracted a lot of new customers who are simply looking for fast yet healthier choices. "People are looking for convenience with a healthier alternative and there are very few options out there," he says, "so we're trying to make it simpler."

PICCADILLO BEAN BOWL FROM THE LOUIE

"We enjoy what a diverse community we live in," says The Louie owner Beth Rutherford. "We carry many options for vegetarians as well as many different varieties of burgers." Customers can order any combination of ingredients and toppings (maybe pineapple, mango or a variety of cheeses) on a salmon, veggie, turkey or beef patty. One favorite is the Ginger Island Burger – beef mixed with soy sauce, ginger, cilantro and sesame oil, and grilled. Rutherford purchased The Louie seven months ago from the previous owners, and named it after her deceased son Louie LaForteza, who owned Bad Ass Coffee Company and who died from heart failure caused by a virus, despite having had two heart transplants. The Louie is a great late-night destination, open until midnight Friday and Saturday.

TODD COOPER

Serves 6

Dry black and northern beans, enough for 2 cups each cooked beans
1 tsp. Cajun-style spices
6 bay leaves
Olive oil for sautéing
1 onion, diced
1 red pepper, diced
1 green pepper, diced
8 garlic cloves, minced

1 28-oz. can diced tomatoes, with juice
3/4 cup golden raisins
1/2 cup Manzanilla olives
1/2 tsp. red wine vinegar

Simmer dry beans with the Cajun-style spices and bay leaves until cooked through. Discard bay leaves. Sauté the cooked beans with the onion, green and red pepper and garlic. Combine the bean mixture with the tomatoes, raisins, olives and vinegar. The Louie serves this on a bed of rice topped with diced tomatoes, cheese, sour cream, avocado and their own mango salsa.

PORK TENDERLOIN WITH APPLE BRANDY SAUCE

FROM A CHANGE OF HEART BISTRO AND CAFÉ

TRASK BEDORTHA

This recipe is one of three reasonably priced ($14.75) "early bird specials" A Change of Heart offers from 5 to 6 pm. Owner Walid Saleeby has more than 40 years of experience in the restaurant business; he owned Willie's, the Waterfront, Terrace Café and Oakway Wine & Deli. Saleeby and executive chef Tim Owen also worked together at the Roadway Inn from 1970-1980. The pair highlight organic, local produce on their bistro-style menu. "Everything is made from scratch," says Saleeby. "Nothing is out of a box." A Change of Heart boasts an extensive wine list featuring Oregon pinot noirs, and offers many infused liquors for delicious cocktails. Enjoy outdoor seating on nice days.

Serves 3 to 4

1 pork tenderloin, 1 1/4 to 1 1/2 lbs., completely trimmed
1 oz. olive oil plus more for searing
1/2 yellow onion, diced
2 ribs celery, diced
2 leeks, white part only, half diced and half julienned
Butter for sweating leeks
2 oz. shallot, diced
1 oz. garlic, chopped
1 Granny Smith apple, cored and sliced
2 cups red wine

2 oz. apple cider vinegar
Pinch of dry leaf thyme and 1 bay leaf
4 oz. demi-glace (reduced, fortified veal stock)
2 oz. heavy cream
1 oz. brandy
Salt and pepper

Prepare the sauce by combining the onion, celery, diced leek and shallot in a one-quart saucepan with one ounce of olive oil. Sauté over medium heat until translucent. Add garlic and apple and stir.

Add red wine, cider vinegar and herbs and reduce over moderate heat until liquid is eliminated.

Add demi-glace and cream and simmer until slightly thickened. Season with salt and pepper.

Heat sauté pan large enough for pork (which may be cut in two pieces), season pork with salt and pepper, sear in olive oil and place in hot oven for about 8 minutes until cooked pink or medium. Meanwhile, sweat julienned leeks (cook in butter over low heat until liquid is exuded and the leeks are soft). Allow pork to rest and slice to serve with sauce. Garnish with leeks on top of sauce.

CALIFORNIA SURFER SALAD

FROM GO HEALTHY CAFÉ

Go Healthy Café's owner Travis Miller says this is their most popular salad. While they serve it with their housemade Kicking It Lime dressing, it can be enjoyed with any bottled lime vinaigrette or even ranch dressing. Like most of the café's menu options, the salad is gluten-free. The café is the first local establishment certified to be gluten-free by GIG (Gluten Intolerance Group of North America, gluten.net). Go Healthy Café utilizes organic and local produce wherever possible, and makes dressings, soups and baked goods from scratch.

Organic romaine leaves
2 oz. cooked organic black beans
1 oz. organic sweet corn
2 oz. shredded pepper jack cheese
1 oz. pico de gallo
(fresh, uncooked tomato salsa)
3 slices of organic avocado

Assemble ingredients, black beans through pico de gallo, atop a bed of the romaine leaves. Top with avocado and serve with 2 oz. of Go Healthy's Kicking It Lime, or dressing of your choice.

VANESSA SALVIA

JALAPEÑO AIOLI

FROM THE BIER STEIN

Aioli might sound intimidating, but essentially it means mayo with spices in it. The Bier Stein uses the jalapeño aioli on two sand-wiches, including the Jive Turkey, pictured, with turkey, pepper jack cheese, tomato and red onion on grilled ciabatta bread; one jalapeño gives it flavor without too much heat. Kristina Measells, co-owner of The Bier Stein, suggests pairing this with the contrasting flavor of a bitter, hoppy, local beer such as Ninkasi Total Domination IPA, Oakshire Watershed IPA or Eugene City Brewery 200 Meter Ale, or a crisp Bohemian Pilsner such as Rebel Czech Pilsner or Pilsner Urquel. If you desire a complimentary spicy flavor, try it with Rogue's Chipotle Ale.

- 1 roasted jalapeño
- 1/4 tsp. garlic, chopped
- 1/4 tsp. ground cumin
- 1/4 tsp. chili powder
- 2 shakes hot sauce
- 1 cup mayonnaise
- Pinch of salt
- Chopped cilantro to taste

Blend all ingredients thoroughly in a food processor.

Niels Arestrup and Tahar Rahim in A Prophet

Meet the New Boss

He's nothing like the old boss

A PROPHET (Un Prophète): Directed by Jacques Audiard. Written by Audiard, Thomas Bidegain, Abdel Raouf Dafri and Nicolas Peuffaillit. Cinematography, Stéphane Fontaine. Music, Alexandre Desplat. Starring Tahar Rahim, Niels Arestrup, Adel Bencherif, Reda Kateb and Hichem Yacoubi. Sony Pictures Classics, 2010. R. 150 minutes. ★ ★ ★ ★ ★

At the outset of A Prophet, a court appointed lawyer tells Malik (Tahar Rahim), "You're an adult now. You go to the joint." In a film as dense as A Prophet, the line has manifold implications. That a penitentiary won't be unfamiliar to Malik is clear enough, given his shifty, surly demeanor, but any suggestion that Malik is an adult is entirely premature. His shoes are stolen moments after entering the jail yard, after which he's badly beaten when he attempts to steal them back. He's illiterate, physically undersized and — worst of all, at least within A Prophet — he's half Muslim in a world where races don't mix. When the French Corsican gang that runs the prison recruits him to kill another Muslim, they're not only exploiting his identity; they're forcing Malik, at an age he should be heading off to college, to kill or be killed by them. What follows is an epic tale of criminal maturation that can only be compared, like last year's Gomorra, to the greatest mafia films of all time.

Malik never earns the respect of the Corsicans, a burly lot who call him a "dirty Arab," but he proves indispensable to their leader, Césaire Luciani (Niels Arestrup), an aging man who exerts a God-like influence over the prison. (Prison guards take orders from Césaire, not the reverse.) When many of the low-level Corsicans are released, Malik becomes Césaire's personal assistant, a position which allows him access to the dealings of a criminal mastermind. When Césaire arranges for Malik to leave the prison on furlough, Malik uses the precious hours to start a hashish ring. In order to succeed, he'll need the backing of his fellow Muslims, a group he works increasingly hard to please — even as the prisoner Malik murdered, Reyeb (Hichem Yacoubi), now haunts him as a ghost. One of the first things Reyeb says to Malik is, "The idea is to leave here a little smarter ..." Consider that obligation met.

At every turn, Malik must negotiate with men who want to reconcile his identity as a Corsican-serving Muslim. The more they think they recognize him, the more they misunderstand his ability to reinvent himself. In its commitment to the morality of violence; to the fluidity of every identity; to the arc of a Prince Hal-like servant who spurns his master, A Prophet is — to use a word rarely germane to current cinema — Shakespearean in its treatment of one boy's journey into adulthood. With luck, cunning, desperation and intelligence (and in many cases, sheer ignorance of the stakes), Malik outgrows the narrow-mindedness of his handlers to emerge as a pure force of will not seen since Al Pacino toward the end of The Godfather. Paced by a soundtrack by Alexandre Desplat, the maestro behind Benjamin Button, The Queen and countless other compositions, A Prophet was awarded the Grand Prix (Second Place) at the 2009 Cannes Film Festival. In a year with perhaps the strongest entries ever for the Best Foreign Language Film Oscar, A Prophet was arguably the best of the bunch. EW

Charles Dowd

The Dowd Effect

The master musician's lasting legacy

Let's bang the drum slowly for longtime Eugene Symphony timpanist and UO percussion prof Charles Dowd, who died last week. Acclaimed by critics and audiences for his performances at festivals, concerts and in studios around the world and across the U.S., Dowd was even more renowned in the percussion world for contributing to the development of what Evelyn Glennie has called the "instrument of the 20th century" through his nine books, many journal publications and teaching residencies. He was best known here for the scintillating performances of the Oregon and University Percussion Ensembles, which — thanks to Dowd's irrepressible combination of fun, ferocious precision and forward looking exploration — regularly gave the most exciting and entertaining concerts at the university. Where so many classical concerts are stiff, staid affairs, UO percussion concerts were always an unpredictable delight, with audiences picking up on the students' joy. Dowd played a major role in solidifying the position of 20th-century percussion composers such as John Cage and Lou Harrison in the repertoire, and shattered the silly barriers between rock and postclassical music by frequently featuring the work of Frank Zappa and others and moving beyond the field's narrow, self-imposed borders. For all that, his most lasting legacy will lie in the high-standard work of the many students, now teaching and performing across the country, he taught and inspired in a 35 year career of the highest musical contributions to this community. We'll miss him, but his beat will go on.

It's a measure of the national respect accorded the UO's new music duo Beta Collide that their concert on April 13 at Beall Concert Hall will feature works created for the faculty duo (flutist fanstastique Molly Barth and uber-trumpeter Brian McWhorter) by one of the world's leading composers, Frederic Rzewski, and three of today's rising compositional stars. Along with a half dozen other top musicians, they'll be joined by one of the world's most renowned new music singers, soprano Lucy Shelton, who has premiered more than 100 new works and won praise for her artistry from practically every major music critic. Shelton's ravishing performance of one her specialties, Arnold Schoenberg's Pierrot Lunaire, with Barth's old band, eighth blackbird, at the Ojai Festival was one of my most memorable musical experiences last year, thanks both to her vocal chops and her riveting dramatic interpretation. The ear-opening concert features a wild, Dadaist style piece by Stanford composer Mark Applebaum that sports various solo stage antics, a haunting work created for the group by Stephn Vitiello, evocative 20th century modernist classics by Luciano Berio (Sequenza III) and Milton Babbitt (Philomel) and the big news: a world premiere by rising young Brooklyn-based composer Justine Chen that offers another take on the Philomel myth. This will certainly be one of the most fascinating concerts of the year.

More new music emanates from the Beall stage April 11 when the excellent faculty violinist and violist Kathryn Lucktenberg leads a quartet of colleagues in a fine program of music by J.S. Bach (one of his splendid solo sonatas), Stravinsky, Faure (Piano Quartet in g minor) and contemporary composer Judith Shatin's Penelope's Song, for amplified viola and electronics. And on April 2, Beall features two multiple award winning guitar virtuosos, Francesco Buzzurro of Sicily and USC prof Richard Smith. Their rep covers material from pop (Michael Jackson, Stevie Wonder) to jazz (Joe Zawinul, Chick Corea) to world music and originals.

It's great to see contemporary music at the Hult Center, too. On April 10, the Eugene Vocal Arts Ensemble will sing one of the most popular recent choral pieces, Leonardo Dreams of His Flying Machine, by the hottest composer in choral music, Eric Whitacre, along with a 20th century masterpiece, Benjamin Britten's Five Flower Songs, and music from the Renaissance forward. This is an excellent chance to see EVAE cover some of the highlights of its admirably wide ranging repertoire.

Eugene has been getting a smattering of classical Indian music performers swinging through town in recent months, so world music fans should welcome the arrival of sarod master Shankar Bhattacharyya from Texas. On April 11 at the Unitarian Universalist Church (477 E. 40th), he and Doug Scheuerell, the tabla player who teaches at the UO and has often performed there, will honor the legacy of one of the 20th century's greatest musicians, Ali Akbar Khan, who died last year after decades of bringing the mesmerizing sound of sarod (the beautiful multi-string lute from Northern India) with a concert of Hindustani classical music. EW

Land of the Lesbros

Yeah, it's a bold display of cojones for a group of long-haired dudes to dub their band Lesbian. Certainly, it's an attention-getting name, and people probably stumble across the band while searching online for something completely different. But it's the music made by these Lesbros that should prove their worth in the world of stoner rock. The truth is, though, Lesbian is an auslander even in that rather hybridized genre.

Ignore the connotations of the name Lesbian; in this sense its most fitting meaning is "dynamic." Most stoner/doom/psychedelic bands set vocals to simmering threat, then find a sweet riff and let it smolder itself out. Lesbian's riffs don't swirl away like smoke; they genetically reassemble themselves. Take "Poisonous Witchball": It's trotting along at a perfectly respectable sludgy pace when the sledgehammer riff turns into a bloopity bloop 16th-note guitar lick à la King Crimson. It's only for a moment, but if you're not expecting it, it makes you blink. The song chugs along again, and that riff keeps reappearing. It grows in strength, then morphs again into a darkly beautiful mood that would be perfectly at home on a Godspeed You Black Emperor! album.

Lesbian's debut album, Power Hör, is only four songs yet clocks in at over an hour. The title track itself is more than 24 minutes long. With songs of that length, there's destined to be a little too much self-aware posturing, yet that's the nature of this particular beast. For my two cents, Lesbian is most interesting when the fast, heavy groove takes control. Lesbian, Rye Wolves and H.C. Minds play at 9 pm Tuesday, April 6, at Oak Street Speakeasy. 21+. – Vanessa Salvia

Traveling Again

In just a few weeks, Nick Jaina's seventh solo record, A Bird in the Opera House, flies into the world, full of gently engrossing songs that resonate like soundtracks to travelogues; you can see sunlight flicker through the Greyhound's tinted windows if you listen closely. A Bird in the Opera House is a sneaky record. You listen to it 17 times and think you don't know it yet, and then, suddenly, you do. It's "Another Kay Song" that does it: the muffled guitar, a repeating melody, Jaina's vocals like a distant cousin to a Spoon song, a sense of tension rising whenever Jaina says "It doesn't matter what you do / I'm blindly in love with you."

The first single, "Sleep, Child," is an unlikely lullaby, though lush strings seep in toward the end of the song; until then, it's wonderfully restless. Jaina's songs are singer-songwriter tunes decked out with extra instrumentation that's lovely, but it's frosting: Jaina's knowing voice would carry even the simplest versions of these tracks. High and quavering in "Asheville," resonant and rich in the tense, troubled "Theresa," that voice seems to play characters that are changed, from track to track, by what Jaina describes. "Your eyes tell so many tales," he sings on "Sebastopol." These dozen songs, all heavy with a sense of place, tell all kinds of tales: mournful, jaunty, heartbroken, playful and wise. Nick Jaina and Leo London play at 9 pm Wednesday, April 7, at Sam Bond's Garage. 21+. Free. – Molly Templeton

Bury Me Out on the Black Prairie

You may not have heard of Black Prairie, but there's a good chance you know of them. Black Prairie features three-fifths of Portland's The Decemberists: guitarist Chris Funk (he plays the square-necked dobro here) and bassist Nate Query incubated the idea of a primarily instrumental band, then recruited fellow Decemberist Jenny Conlee to play accordion. Violinst Jon Neufled from Jackstraw and fiddle player Annalisa Tornfelt joined them to hatch the project. Funk rather modestly describes it as a string band. It is so only inasmuch as a Bach composition is a keyboard jam.

Black Prairie's debut album, Feast of the Hunters' Moon, will be released April 6. Funk's description is a little more accurate when he says the band "bridges the music of Clarence White and Ennio Morricone" in a way that defies genre characterization – in other words, folky bluegrass combined with haunting gypsy melodies outside the typical structures of such songs. There's an almost classical aesthetic in the way several melodies within a song break apart and return together.

The album's 13 tracks are mostly instrumental, but Tornfelt's voice is so perfectly meshed with the dark beauty of the music that the band made the right decision in allowing her to sing on some tracks.

My personal instrumental favorite is "Atrocity at Celilo Falls." Not only does the subject represent a heart-wrenching loss, but the song has the kind of sad beauty that curls itself up into every lonely, isolated space. The album's 13 tracks feature mostly original material, but also include traditional songs, such as "The Blackest Crow," a lamentation over two lovers parting. Black Prairie and Mimicking Birds play at 9:30 pm Friday, April 2, at Sam Bond's Garage. 21+. $8. – Vanessa Salvia

Mellow Stereo

Three Way Stereo, according to the band's MySpace page, emerges from the heart of Eugene into yours. Their latest release, Everything Is, has just four songs, but its soothing rhythmic guitar melodies and understated percussion might be just the thing for mellowing out with your friends.

Be warned: If you don't like The Strokes, run away, fast: These guys sound a lot like 'em. The percussion at the beginning of "Bound to Fail" is identical to the intro beat in The Strokes' "Alone Together," and hey, guess what? Three Way Stereo actually did cover The Strokes' "Reptilia." But the quartet seems to have this garage-rock charm you can't miss: Kyle Everett, main singer and guitarist, actually sings rather than trying to sound just like Julian Casablancas. The other bandmembers, Eric Wenzel on guitar, Adrian Swindells on bass and Rick Buhr playing drums, balance each other out well, no musician trying too hard to outshine the others. They band has posted YouTube videos on their music page, in which they jam on a few of their songs, making music and having a good time doing it. Three Way Stereo's influences may be clear, but they don't try to hide that fact – and they still manage to create their own sound. Three Way Stereo and Shinto play at 9 pm Friday, April 2, at the Oak Street Speakeasy. 21+. – Darcy Wallace

Assjack and the Horse They Rode In On

The apple doesn't fall far from the tree, but what it hits on the way down is anybody's guess. Hank Williams III is a physical and vocal dead ringer for his legendary grandfather, but his version of country is run through the meat grinder of hardcore punk and thrash metal, and the results, variously, are a collision of "hellbilly" and cow punk that sound like some Southern fried mish-mash of Motörhead and Black Flag. Thin as a rail and covered in tattoos, Hank 3 is a latter-day folk outlaw, proudly carrying on the family name by singing those cocksucker blues for a brand new era of blue-collar carnies and snaggle-toothed malcontents. Hee-haw, pass the Bud and bring on the superfuzz.

Hank 3 & Assjack, Williams' hardcore outfit, play anthemic, squealing, heavy-as-fuck hardcore that is tinged at the edges by the high lonesome country that his grandpappy all but created. Live, Assjack play punk like old cars throw a rod, creating an aggressive, darkly joyful noise that sounds like the grinding of metal on metal and the howling anger and pain such a grinding might induce. Rat-a-tat rhythms set the pace for chunky riffs and howling runs up and down the guitar neck, while young Hank barks and chants about familiar concerns: sin, drugs, deadbeats and getting screwed by motherfuckers. Hell, if that ain't country music, what is? Hank III and Assjack play with Kyle Turley at 8 pm Saturday, April 3, at WOW Hall. $20 adv., $23 door. – Rick Levin

Crafty Duo

Where have Betty and the Boy been hiding? The Eugene duo – they count "various good friends" among the bandmembers, but the core is Bettreena Jaeger and Josh Harvey – sent us a low-key, hand-labeled CD that doesn't even come up in iTunes. No track names here, which makes the whole venture seem, somehow, deliciously nebulous. Betty and the Boy make eerie, heartbroken, old-time lullabies (to steal a line from one of their songs), led by Jaeger's changeable voice, which wisps and turns throaty as suits the duo's banjo-sparked, accordion-sprinkled and slightly ragtag tunes. "Betty and the Boy are a classic example of the pretty-girl-with-plenty-of-baggage meets PunkRock-boy-with-a-bad-attitude love story," their bio says. You can believe that, or you can suspect that most of those love stories don't result in such compellingly forlorn songs. Some of the duo's songs are in need of a little tightening up, but the best of their tracks carry an enticing weariness, a yawning, striped-tights-and-worn-bustles cabaret slinkiness. These are ballads for drowned soldiers and folk laments for a lost era, each one handmade, smudged and bittersweet. Betty and the Boy and Marshall McLean play at 9 pm Thursday, April 1, at the Wandering Goat (21+, free) and with Anticipate Pie at 8 pm Friday, April 2, at the Axe & Fiddle, Cottage Grove. (21+, $4). – Molly Templeton

Bee Spells Fun

Actors Cabaret show is wickedly funny

F-a-c-e-t-i-o-u-s. Facetious; given to or marked by mature intelligent humor. From the middle French facetieux; meaning to joke or jest inappropriately.

If you want to use this word in a sentence, start talking about Actors Cabaret's The 25th Annual Putnam County Spelling Bee, where the simple power of a witty script and the well-timed delivery of a good joke have audiences laughing as they are drawn through the heartbreak of pre-teen angst.

Why are we so obsessed with spelling bees? Most people I know can't spell worth ordure (def: crap, from the Anglo-French root ord, meaning crap) yet everyone can identify with the pressure. To kids on the cusp of teenagehood, it really does feel as if the whole world is judging, whether you're in a spelling bee or the school cafeteria. Watching this play threw me back for a swim in the murky waters of pre-adolescence. These children try to carve out what they are in this world, while struggling under the murderous pressure of adult expectations. The play is funny, but it can be wickedly harsh on the parents of the spellers. Madelyn Schwartz (as Marcy Park) sings with all the anger of a "gifted" child: I Speak Six Languages strikes at the heart of ego-parenting that takes many forms beyond spelling superiority.

Joe Zingo's direction brings out an air of Christopher Guest in this show; it plays like a mockumentary with musical asides. Audience participation adds appropriate real-word absurdity. Four really brave audience members are called up on stage and asked to publicly spell. I got the feeling they were carefully chosen for traits of willingness and self-confidence, but they weren't plants. Or maybe the reminders of Best in Show and Waiting for Guffman came from the veridical (def: accurate, exact, from Latin veridicus, meaning true.) performances of Maida Belove and Bruce McCarty as the bee announcers.

This production strikes a nice balance of infusing newcomers to ACE, such as Erynne Hollens (who plays Logainne Schwartzandgrubenierre) and Dylan Stasack (who plays Leaf Coneybear), and coaxing substantially contradistinctive (a word that entered the English language in 1647 and hasn't been much of a favorite since) performances out of the seasoned workhorses. Sophie Mitchell (Olive Ostrovsky) had me in tears throughout the second act and even in my car on the way home. Nearly recognizable was ACE favorite Mark Van Beever as the socially awkward spelling savant William Barfee. The 25th Annual Putnam County Spelling Bee is delightful. It will make you love big words and awkward children and the sheer pandemonium of mixing the two in a high stakes contest. Hard on the heels of their successful experiment with CATS! Actors Cabaret strikes again with a poignant, jocose staging of the most awkward stage of life. EW

The 25th Annual Putnam County Spelling Bee continues through April 24 at ACE. Tix at actorscabaret.org or 541-683-4368.

Memories and Futures

Gayle Forman presents a shattered idyll

IF I STAY, young adult fiction by Gayle Forman. Speak, 2010 (paperback edition). $8.99.

Don't drive on Hwy. 99 in snowy, icy conditions, OK? Oregonians probably know that already. For 17-year-old Mia and her tender, loving family (mom, dad, young brother Teddy), the decision to go from what seems to be Corvallis to her grandparents' house near Portland turns into a tragedy in the 2009 novel If I Stay.

Mia's a privileged girl, a fantastic cello player about to go to Juilliard (which, for this young woman, feels like a different country). She has a wonderful, loving boyfriend who's a popular indie rocker; she has a intensely caring best friend. We know all of this because as Mia lies on the verge of death in intensive care at a Portland hospital, her friends and remaining family gather around her, trying to convince her that she still has something to live for. She can hear them talking and watch them interacting; her consciousness is floating somewhere, able to go a certain distance from her body and — without interacting — understand what's happening.

The concept, hoary and hokey, sounds designed to appeal to fans of Lurlene McDaniel's "weepies," but Oregon author Forman turns the tale into something more meditative and existential. Mia's a thoughtful, complex character in horrific circumstances, suspended in an agonizing and terrible place.

Does she have enough left to live for? Despite the fundamentally melodramatic plot and one silly episode, If I Stay holds tension, longing, grief and humanity as Mia spends the long night making her decision. EW

Gayle Forman reads at 7 pm Monday, April 5, at Powell's at Cedar Hills Crossing, Beaverton.

Foolin' Around

Tea baggers can't be choosers

We've had too many fools to fool around: I hope Eugeneans had the chance to view the recent tea-bagger demonstration, screeching hatred of the health reform bill and captured on YouTube, wherein a counter-demonstrator sat in front of the 'baggers, guy holding a sign noting that he had Parkinson's disease. Two truly macho badass 'baggers got in guy's face to let him know that he'd get no "handouts" in this neighborhood. One 'bagger went so far as to throw money in the sick guy's face, then strut away most manly. Makes you wonder how his species handles health care, and what novel forms of fundraising they employ on his planet. My brother David suggested maybe Mr. Bag had smoked too much Palin.

I'm fairly sure the macho 'bagger wasn't connected to wine — as maker, grower or otherwise — largely because winefolk have such a strong record in support of a wide variety of charitable causes — and I've never heard of anyone in wine-world tossing, say, a glass of pinot into the face of a person suffering from a crippling disease.

For a rather different view of how community oughta work, check out the epic efforts of Robert (Bob) Canaga, who set out this year to stock the annual auction supporting the Oregon Mozart Players by soliciting one bottle from every Oregon winery. Canaga's blog tells a lovely tale (<http://wkly.ws/gc>) of generous people and tasty tipples. More than 250 wines will be auctioned (some silent, some oral) at this year's event, titled "Rhapsody in Blue," starting at 5:30 pm Friday, April 9, at the Eugene Hilton. Call 541-345-6648 for reservations and prices — also to arrange phone bidding, if you must. Canaga's blog, while fun to read for many reasons, also contains a list of the wines, most quite spectacular — but I really want Howard Hughes's hat (auction item).

It's generally known that hard economic times have slowed wine sales and driven down prices, at least for consumers, so the generosity of the winemakers must be applauded. At the same time, as consumers we might cheer ourselves by finding superb quality wearing affordable tickets. Like these:

Last year's bargain in high-flavor pinot noir is back for a reprise. Veridian 2007 Estate Grown Pinot Noir ($13!) is just terrific for the price — distinctive cherry/raspberry fruit, some spice notes, enough oak to add depth, enough acidity to complement rich foods. It's also proof among some Oregon pinot-fiends that the 2007 vintage produced some jewels of genuine Oregon pinot noir character; one very knowledgeable nutball of our acquaintance insists that 2007 was the BEST vintage of the decade. Sheesh, what a crazoid — but he's no tea bagger.

Of course, there's added evidence from Lemelson's Six Vineyards 2007 Willamette Valley Pinot Noir ($18), rich and round and satisfying, with a pretty pinot profile, flavorful and well-balanced.

Want a super Oregon chardonnay? Finding Domaine Meriwether 2005 Chardonnay Willamette Valley ($16) might take some sleuthing, but following this trail will lead to a glass of pale gold elixir. And, yeah, I got the year right; Buzz Kawders, owner of Domaine Meriwether, said, "It's our philosophy to let our wines have time in the bottle before we send them to market. That gives the wines the chance to round out and come together." This chardonnay had time in neutral French oak barrels, melding the chardonnay flavors for citrus and tropical notes, carefully framed and balanced.

All that, no foolin', no baggin' ... EW

A purchaser who buys this property at a foreclosure sale has the right to require you to move out after giving you notice of the requirement. If you do not have a fixed-term lease, the purchaser may require you to move out after giving you a 30-day notice on or after the date of the sale. If you have a fixed-term lease, you may be entitled to receive after the date of the sale a 60-day notice of the purchaser's requirement that you move out. To be entitled to either a 30-day or 60-day notice, you must give the trustee of the property written evidence of your rental agreement at least 30 days before the date first set for the sale. If you have a fixed-term lease, you must give the trustee a copy of the rental agreement. If you do not have a fixed-term lease and cannot provide a copy of the rental agreement, you may give the trustee other written evidence of the existence of the rental agreement. ### TRUSTEE'S NOTICE OF SALE

The Trustee under the terms of the Trust Deed described herein, at the direction of the Beneficiary, hereby elects to sell the property described in the Trust Deed to satisfy the obligations secured thereby. Pursuant to ORS 86.745, the following information is provided: 1. PARTIES: Grantor: LAURA L. DANDURAND. Trustee: WESTERN PIONEER TITLE COMPANY OF LANE COUNTY. Successor Trustee: NANCY K. CARY. Beneficiary: OREGON HOUSING AND COMMUNITY SERVICES DEPARTMENT, STATE OF OREGON, assignee of SIUSLAW VALLEY BANK. 2. DESCRIPTION OF PROPERTY: The real property is described as follows: Lot 26, WALNUT ORCHARD PHASE II, as platted and recorded in File 75, Slides 166 and 167, Lane County Oregon Plat Records, in the City of Eugene, in Lane County, Oregon. 3. RECORDING: The Trust Deed was recorded as follows: Date Recorded: March 23, 2001. Recording No. 2001-016047. Official Records of Lane County, Oregon. 4. DEFAULT: The Grantor or any other person obligated on the Trust Deed and Promissory Note secured thereby is in default and the Beneficiary seeks to foreclose the Trust Deed for failure to pay: A payment of $141.00 for the month of September 2009, plus regular monthly payments of $594.00 each, due the first of each month, for the months of September 2009 through January 2010; plus late charges and advances; plus any unpaid real property taxes or liens, plus interest. 5. AMOUNT DUE. The amount due on the Note which is secured by the Trust Deed referred to herein is: Principal balance in the amount of $57,855.86; plus interest at the rate of 5.9500% per annum from August 1, 2009; plus late charges of $289.72; plus advances and foreclosure attorney fees and costs. 6. SALE OF PROPERTY. The Trustee hereby states that the property will be sold to satisfy the obligations secured by the Trust Deed. A Trustee's Notice of Default and Election to Sell Under Terms of Trust Deed has been recorded in the Official Records of Lane County, Oregon. 7. TIME OF SALE. Date: June 3, 2010. Time: 11:00 a.m. Place: Lane County Courthouse, 125 E. 8th Avenue, Eugene, OR. 8. RIGHT TO REINSTATE. Any person named in ORS 86.753 has the right, at any time that is not later than five days before the Trustee conducts the sale, to have this foreclosure dismissed and the Trust Deed reinstated by payment to the Beneficiary of the entire amount then due, other than such portion of the principal as would not then be due had no default occurred, by curing any other default that is capable of being cured by tendering the performance required under the obligation or Trust Deed and by paying all costs and expenses actually incurred in enforcing the obligation and Trust Deed, together with the trustee's and attorney's fees not exceeding the amount provided in ORS 86.753. NOTICE TO TENANTS: If you are a tenant of this property, foreclosure could affect your rental agreement. A purchaser who buys this property at a foreclosure sale has the right to require you to move out after giving you notice of the requirement. If you do not have a fixed-term lease, the purchaser may require you to move out after giving you a 30-day notice on or after the date of the sale. If you have a fixed-term lease, you may be entitled to receive after the date of the sale a 60-day notice of the purchaser's requirement that you move out. To be entitled to either a 30-day or 60-day notice, you must give the trustee of the property written evidence of your rental agreement at least 30 days before the date first set for the sale. If you have a fixed-term lease, you must give the trustee a copy of the rental agreement. If you do not have a fixed-term lease and cannot provide a copy of the rental agreement, you

A purchaser who buys this property at a foreclosure sale has the right to require you to move out after giving you notice of the requirement. If you do not have a fixed-term lease, the purchaser may require you to move out after giving you a 30-day notice on or after the date of the sale. If you have a fixed-term lease, you must give the trustee a copy of the rental agreement. If you do not have a fixed-term lease and cannot provide a copy of the rental agreement, you may give the trustee other written evidence of the existence of the rental agreement. The date that is 30 days before the date of the sale is May 11, 2010. The name of the trustee and the trustee's mailing address are listed on this notice. Federal law may grant you additional rights, including a right to a longer notice period. Consult a lawyer for more information about your rights under federal law. You have the right to apply your security deposit and any rent you prepaid toward your current obligation under your rental agreement. If you want to do so, you must notify your landlord in writing and in advance that you intend to do so. If you believe you need legal assistance with this matter, you may contact the Oregon State Bar and ask for the lawyer referral service. Contact information for the Oregon State Bar is included with this notice. If you have a low income and meet federal poverty guidelines, you may be eligible for free legal assistance. Contact information for where you can obtain free legal assistance is included with this notice. You may reach the Oregon State Bar's Lawyer Referral Service at 503-684-3763 or toll-free in Oregon at 800-452-7636 or you may visit its website at: www.osbar.org. ## S.A.R.A.'s Shelter Animal Resource Alliance Rescued Cat of the Week

Gonzo is a fun and crazy 3 year old black and white guy who is so energetic and busy. Gonzo loves to run and watch birds from his outdoor enclosure and as much as he would like to go outside, we know that indoor cats are much safer. Gonzo doesn't realize that he can't run free and is very insistent about this, so he needs to be in a safe place like a completely secure dog run or an enclosed porch. He really loves the laser pointer and a feather stick, but is not the best sharer. Stop by soon to meet this handsome guy and if you are doing some spring cleaning, don't forget to bring in your donations (check our website for items we need and can take) which are tax deductible.

Greenhill * Pet of the Week *

Patches is a lovely 9 year-old black and white lady with long fur. She's talkative, friendly and especially likes being groomed. This gentle girl likes a little quieter living space than what the GHS cattery floor has to offer, so you'll find her in the Shy Room – a special room set aside for those cats who love people but who prefer a quieter pace of life with only a few gentle kitty friends. She gets along well with other cats, but dogs and children are a little too noisy for her taste. She was an indoors only kitty in her previous home before being transferred to Greenhill from another shelter. Patches has a lot of love to share and gives it freely - come collect some today!

During the month of April the adoptions fees of all cats 7 years-old and up are 50% off, including Patches!

THURSTON CART PUSHER

You: Scanning groceries. Short hair and long fingernails. Nice chin strap! Me: In your line with baby food and coupons. Like kids? You can scan my barcode anytime! When: Saturday, February 27, 2010. Where: Thurston Albertsons. You: Man. Me: Woman. #901408

10/6

It wasn't the Thermasil, nor the thermostat I ate. It was... time for tea! The-Time! The-Time!! First time I was rude indeed, but please again enjoy with me. At Sea? When: Thursday, March 25, 2010. Where: Elsewhere. You: Woman. Me: Man. #901406

BEAUTIFULL BASQUE

Me: Always wanting your attention You: Elegant and Electrifying Everything is going to be alright. Maite Zaitut! When: Friday, March 19, 2010. Where: at school. You: Woman. Me: Man. #901404

US BANK CHAMBERS

3/23 Noon Tuesday. I left my card in ATM and you returned it before leaving in my green truck. You: Tall, Long Hair, black pickup. Interested? I am. When: Tuesday, March 23, 2010. Where: US Bank on Chambers. You: Man. Me: Woman. #901403

SARAH SO SWEET

YOU have made these last few days in Eugene some of the best. Though we have 64 crayons in our boxes, combining the two boxes, any picture is possible. When: Wednesday, March 24, 2010. Where: In my kitchen. You: Woman. Me: Man. #901402

I SAW YOU

SPENCER'S BUTTE WOMAN

I missed your add. If you still want to go out for a drink with a guy who carried you down the mountain let me know. When: Sunday, January 3, 2010. Where: Spencer's Butte. You: Woman. Me: Man. #901407

MY BRAILLES ANGEL

Dec. 19th, 2009...9AM. You took my breath way, and haven't regained my composure since. Hope I don't screw this up.... well....perhaps I should reword that.love...your lovin spoonful When: Saturday, December 19, 2009. Where: Braille's. You: Woman. Me: Man. #901401

TSUNAMI GIRL

Stopping to kiss while tidal waves came crashing down. The same rush I feel every time I look into your eyes. Every day I feel myself falling for you more. When: Saturday, February 27, 2010. Where: our secluded beach. You: Woman. Me: Man. #901400

ANGEL OF NEPTUNE

You: Gone South for suntans and gerontologic happy hours. Me: Left bereft of necessary concordian flights of fancy. Come back to the cold North and let me cook you dinner. When: Sunday, March 14, 2010. Where: over miso. You: Woman. Me: Man. #901399

BALD-ARROGANT-HOT

YOU-I have admired from afar at Off the Waffle, Newman's and waiting for beans at Full City. You are bald, arrogant and hot. I want to see your toes. ME-I picture myself as Salma Hayek, but am actually very thin & surly w/ black rimmed glasses. My friends say I'm churlish. But alas, you are encumbered. I must admire only from afar. When: Friday, March 26, 2010. Where: around town, sometimes in an EWEB truck. You: Man. Me: Woman. #901409

free will astrology

BY ROB BREZSNY

ARIES (March 21-April 19): I'm worried about your ability to sneak and fake and dissemble. These skills seem to have atrophied in you. To quote Homer Simpson, "You couldn't fool your own mother on the foolingest day of your life with an electrified fooling machine!" Please, Aries, jump back into the game-playing, BS-dispensing routine the rest of us are caught up in. APRIL FOOL! Everything I just said was a filthy lie. In fact, I admire the candor and straightforwardness you've been cultivating. My only critique is that maybe you could take some of the edge off it. Try telling the raw truth with more relaxed grace.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): You'll probably dream of falling off a cliff, or plunging out of a hot-air balloon, or skydiving without a parachute. I'm very disappointed in your unconscious mind's decision to expose yourself to such unpleasant experiences, even if they are pretend. APRIL FOOL! I told you a half-truth. While it is likely that you will dream of diving off a mountaintop or tumbling out of a hot-air balloon or flying through the big sky without a parachute, your unconscious mind has arranged it so that you will land softly and safely in a giant pile of foam padding and feathers next to a waterfall whose roaring flow is singing your name. Despite the apparent inconvenience in the first part of the dream, you will be taken care of by the end.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): On the Ghost Hunters TV program, paranormal researchers investigate places that are thought to be haunted by supernatural entities. One commercial for the show urges us, the viewers, to "Get fluent in fear!" That exhortation happens to be perfect advice for you, Gemini. APRIL FOOL! I lied. This is not at all a good time for you to get fluent in fear. But more than that. It's actually a momentous time to get un-fluent in fear. You have an unprecedented opportunity to stop casually exposing yourself to anxiety-inducing influences. You have amazing power to shut down that place in your imagination where you generate your scary fantasies. The conquest of your fears could be at hand!

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Your gambling chakra is conspiring with your inner roughneck to pull a fast one on your dignity chakra and your inner wuss. If they get away with their scheme you may find yourself having ridiculous yet holy fun in high places. And I wouldn't be surprised if in the course of these hijinks, your spirit guides channeled some holistic karma into the part of your psychic anatomy that we in the consciousness business call your "spiritual orgy button." APRIL FOOL! Sorry if that sounded a bit esoteric. I was invoking some faux shamanic jargon in the hope of bypassing your rational mind and tricking you into experiencing a fizzy, buoyant altered state, which would be an excellent tonic for both your mental and physical health.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): "I eat pressure for breakfast," says Leo-born James Cameron, director of Avatar and Titanic, the two highest grossing films ever made. Like many in your tribe, he has a very high opinion of himself. "Anybody can be a father or a husband," he told his fourth wife Linda Hamilton. "There are only five people in the world who can do what I do, and I'm going for that." He's your role model. APRIL FOOL! I lied. While I do urge you to focus intensely on the quality or talent that's most special about you, I strongly discourage you from neglecting your more ordinary roles. In Cameron's case, I'd advise him to start working on his next fantastic project but also spiff up his skills as a husband and father.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Do NOT, under any circumstances, express your anger at the mainstream media by taking a baseball bat into a superstore full of electronic gear and smashing 32 TV sets. Keep it to a minimum of 15 sets, please! APRIL FOOL! I lied. I definitely don't recommend that you smash any TVs with a baseball bat. However, you do have permission to bash and smash things in your imagination. In fact I encourage it. Engaging in a fantasy of breaking inanimate objects that symbolize what oppresses you will shatter a certain mental block that desperately needs shattering.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): As I studied your astrological data, a curious vision popped into my mind's eye. I saw a scene of a perky possum in a superhero costume giving you a tray of red jello covered with marshmallows, gumdrops, and chocolate kisses. And I knew immediately that it was a prime metaphor for your destiny right now. APRIL FOOL! I lied, sort of. Your imminent future may feature an unlikely offering from an unexpected source, but that offering will simply be like red Jell-o from a possum – with no superhero costume, and no marshmallows, gumdrops, or chocolate kisses.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): I sincerely hope that 2010 will be the year you stop worshipping Satan for good. Luckily, the coming weeks will be an excellent time to get that worthy project in gear. Despite the odd pleasures your twisted devotion to the Evil One seems to bring you, it actually undermines your ability to get what you want. The ironic fact of the matter is that pure unrepentant selfishness – the kind that Satan celebrates – is the worst possible way to achieve your selfish goals. APRIL FOOL! I know you don't really worship Satan. I was just hoping to jolt you into considering my real desire for you, which is to achieve your selfish goals by cultivating more unselfishness.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): According to Uncyclopedia.com, Riding the Snake is a book co-authored by Oscar Wilde and Jesus Christ in 1429 B.C. If you can find a copy, I strongly suggest you read it. You could really use some help in taming the unruly kundalini that has been whipping you around. APRIL FOOL! I lied. There is no such ancient book. But that doesn't change the fact that you'd really benefit from getting more control over your instinctual energy. I'd love to see your libidinous power be more thoroughly harnessed in behalf of your creative expression.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Supermodel Selita Ebanks is your role model. In accordance with the astrological omens, I recommend that you arrange for the kind of special treatment she enjoys as she's preparing for a runway show. That means getting five stylists to work for hours every day perfecting every aspect of your physical appearance. Please make sure they apply no less than 20 layers of makeup to your butt. APRIL FOOL! I lied. The omens say this is not a good time to obsess on your outer beauty. They do suggest, however, that attending to your inner beauty would be smart. So please do the equivalent of getting 20 layers of makeup applied to your soul's butt.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Would it be a wise idea for you to stage your own kidnapping and demand ransom money for your release? Should you appear on a reality TV show that will expose your intimate secrets to millions of viewers? Could you get your spiritual evolution back on track by joining a religious cult? APRIL FOOL! The questions I just posed were terrible! They were irrelevant to the destiny you should be shaping for yourself. But they were provocative, and may therefore be the nudge you need to get smarter about formulating your choices. It has never been more important than it is right now for you to ask yourself good questions.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): It's an excellent time to demonstrate how strong and brave and indomitable you are. I suggest you carry out some heroic feat, like lying on a bed of nails while someone puts heavy concrete blocks all over your body, then uses a sledgehammer to smash those blocks. APRIL FOOL! What I just said is only half true. While it's an excellent time to prove your mettle, there are far more constructive ways to do it than lying on a bed of nails. For example, you could try shaking off a bad influence that chronically saps your energy.

Savage Love

WORDS OF PURE WISDOM by Dan Savage

I am writing to you because I know my boyfriend reads your column religiously. I don't know what to do. My boyfriend of almost two years broke up with me yesterday over the fact that I used to be an escort. He went through my e-mails and saw that I was answering ads, putting ads up, sending photos. We had been planning a future together, talking about moving in, getting married, having kids, etc., and then this happened.

I know I either should've told him about my past or shouldn't have succumbed to temptation. I started doing this again a year ago because I got fired from my job and couldn't find anything. I was so in love with this guy that I didn't mind staying at home waiting for him all day, doing everything and anything to make him happy. It took a toll on me, and I couldn't support myself. Then a friend recommended that I start escorting again. And then this guy e-mailed me saying he would give me $3,000 to sleep with him, and I couldn't say no.

What do I do, Dan? I can't eat, sleep or even do anything. All I want is to hold my boyfriend and to be held. How do I make things better? I am disgusted with the person I am and feel so dirty.

No One Real To Hold

I don't want to salt your wounds, NORTH, but your boyfriend didn't find out that you "used to be an escort." He found out that you are an escort. Even those of us who believe that sex work should be legal and that sex workers shouldn't be stigmatized also believe that a sex worker's romantic partners have a right to know about the sex work. Just as people have a general right to know when their partners are sleeping with others, sex workers' romantic partners have a right to know about the sex work – and consent to it – because it places them at heightened risk of sexually transmitted infections.

There's probably no salvaging this relationship. The scale of the betrayal is just too great, NORTH, and your efforts to shift blame – it's your friend's fault for suggesting you get back into sex work, it was that guy's fault for offering you $3,000, it was your boyfriend's fault (!) for occupying all your time (?) – demonstrate that you have yet to take full responsibility for your actions. You would need to do that, NORTH, at least that, before your ex could begin to think about taking you back.

Finally, NORTH, if doing sex work makes you feel this way – ashamed and dirty – please stop doing sex work.

What's the etiquette for having sex when you're a guest in another person's house? Friends spent the night and shared some passion. I don't have a problem with this. However, this was period-sex, and I was left with bloody, sex-stained sheets. Am I wrong to be annoyed? Can I ask them to replace the sheets?

Hostess With The Menses

Your guests had to know – if your sheets were a bloody mess, so were your guests – and they should have offered to replace your sheets. You're right to be annoyed. If you believe your friends are selfish and inconsiderate – if you think they didn't care about they mess they left for you – confront them, ask for replacements, and cultivate other friendships. But if you know your friends to be deeply sex-negative, HWTM, it's possible they were so mortified by the mess – evidence that they'd had sex! – and were paralyzed by shame. If that's the case, let it slide, buy your own replacements, and cultivate other friendships.

The etiquette for having sex when you're a guest in another person's house goes like this: Polite guests do not leave a bloody, spunky or santorumy mess for their hosts to clean up. Staying in the guest room and desperately horny? Sounds like the perfect opportunity for an extended – and tidy – oral-sex session. Staying in the guest room and want to fuck? Fuck on the desk, fuck standing up, fuck in the shower. If your partner is one of those only-in-bed, only-on-my-back types, lay a towel down on your host's sheets – or, better yet, a couple of your own T-shirts – and fuck away.

Thoughtful hosts purchase dark sheets and towels for guest suites. And if guests leave a towel on the floor of the bathroom in a neat little ball, toss that towel in the wash – with extra bleach if the towels are white – without unfurling and inspecting. Be warned: An unwise host who unfurls a balled-up white towel may find herself staring at what looks like the flag of imperial Japan. And if your guests are courteous enough to strip the bed before they leave, those balled-up sheets go straight into the wash, too.

I'm a young adult gay virgin. Recently, though, an incredibly sweet, incredibly intelligent guy expressed a desire to blow me (among many other things). He also happens to be, without exaggeration, the hottest guy I've ever met in my life. I lusted after him for the better part of a year before I found out he was gay. So, naturally, I want to pursue this.

There are complications. Along with my obligatory first-time jitters, I have to deal with the reality that we will be working together all day, every day, through the fall. Which could be awkward if there's any awkwardness after the fact. Which brings me to my main worry: I'm not circumcised. I've always been a little insecure about it. The one friend I trust enough to ask about this basically said that she would immediately abort oral if she realized a guy was uncut.

If I don't do this, I'll regret it for the rest of my life (he really is that hot), but my friend's opinion has me worried beyond reason. I'm at a loss, Dan. Please help?
Uncircumcised 'N' Completely Unexperienced Teen

You shouldn't put too much stock in one friend's opinion about uncut cock, UNCUT, particularly if that friend isn't all that experienced either and – I hope all the sex-and-foreskin-positive single ladies will forgive me for this – when that friend is a lady girl. Some young women are squeamish about oral generally, and foreskins particularly, because they don't have much experience with cock, cut or uncut.

Gay men are much less likely to be squeamish about uncut cock; indeed, lots of gay men prefer uncut cock. My God, UNCUT, there are enough gay men out there with a fetish for foreskins to support a foreskin-specific porn genre for gay men. And even if this guy doesn't have a strong preference for uncut cock, UNCUT, it's highly unlikely that he'll be turned off by your clean, uncut cock.

As for any potential awkwardness after the fuct, UNCUT, if the hottest guy you've ever swapped blowjobs in in your life – presuming the exchange of blowjobs goes down – is cold and distant, or even hostile, it might be because he doesn't want to get with you again. And like an idiot/asshole/amateur, he believes that being a dick is the only way to keep you from getting the wrong idea. If that happens, UNCUT, you'll have to be the grown-up. Get him alone and tell him that, hey, it's totally cool if he doesn't want to mess around again, but you don't want things to be weird. Tell him you intend to burn through any lingering feelings of awkwardness by being civil and polite to him and that you would appreciate the same from him.

UO Announces New Center for Athletic Corrections

said football coach Chunk Belly.

only thin mattresses on concrete in cramped, windowless jail cells, the UO facility will feature French Ligne Roset beds, Ferrari leather sofas, widescreen TVs, PlayStation video games, jacuzzis and a juice bar in each spacious cell. For security, the see-through cube building will include unbreakable Plexiglas, swoosh-shaped ankle monitoring

High-tech air-dry urinals in the center will include light sculptures of bracelets and a deeper moat.

Pope ducks in UO practice

BY BOB SNARK

The Regular-Garbage

In a move athletic departments across the nation are hailing as a public relations coup, the UO football team met yesterday with Pope Benedict XVI for a pre-season pep talk that was equal parts papal and practical, and that one player described as “a real uplifting slap on the ass."

His hominess took a knee at Arizona Stadium's 50-yard line prior to having the entire squad form a single file line and run past him as he administered a sporting slap to each player's backside — a universal gesture of goodwill and encouragement. Pope Ratzinger is the acting head coach/CEO of the Vatican and a good friend to strapping young men the world over.
